He-Man Shortage.

Chicago Daily News: "I guess he-men have gone out of style," declared the young fellow who believed everything he heard. "I saw something in trousers today with rouged cheeks and plucked eyebrows!"

"Probably it was a girl," commented the gloomy man, who doubted everything he heard. "You can't tell 'em nowadays, with their boy haircuts and boyish figures and knickers and hiking trousers. I can't tell 'em. I avoid everything that has pink cheeks!"

"About the only place I see any real live-wire fellows with pep and go and punch is in the movies," declared the young fellow who believed everything. "They do put on some good cow-punchers and rough riders and wild-west shows!"

"Yep, and they're about as true to life as royalty done in Hollywood," grunted the pessimistic man. "Anybody who has lived on a ranch knows that if cowboys rushed the cattle around as they do in a picture they'd drive off sixty pounds of beef a minute."

"But you can't deny that the movies put on some regular fights," said the young fellow who believed everything he saw and heard.

"Oh, yes!" sneered the pessimist, "with every knockout prestaged and previewed. I saw them taking a fight once and the fighters came out of the fray with nothing worse than a torn shirt and a rumpled pompadour!"

"But leaving the movies out of the question," persisted the young fellow who believed everything. "I guess old U. S. A. has furnished a pretty good record of regular fellows. There's Miles Standish and George Washington and Ulysses Grant—"

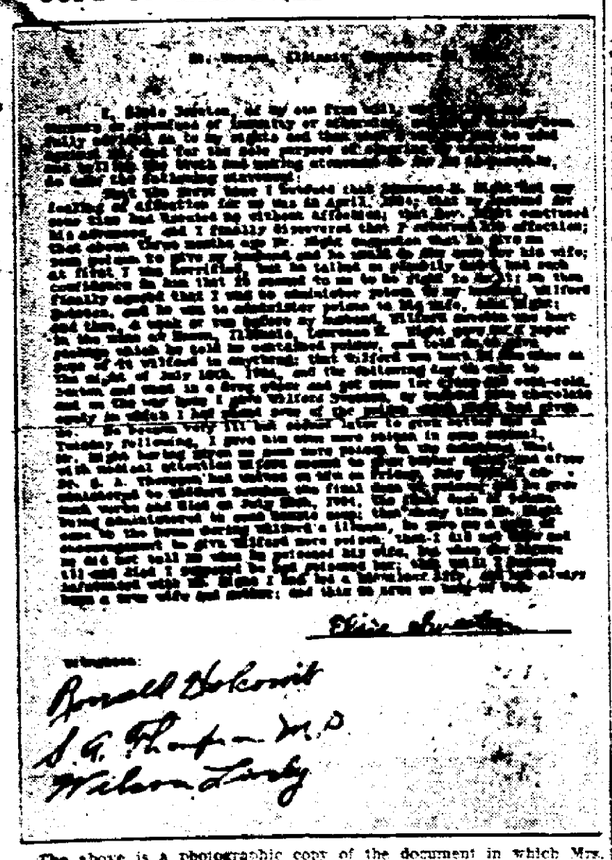

"If everybody was as pessimistic as you are," complained the young fellow, "we'd never have any more heroes. But I guess we needn't to cry out loud as long as we have some he-men to cross the continent in a nonstop flight to do the Magellan act with wings and to run for president of the greatest country in the world!"

JOHNSON ISSUES COMMENT

Declares It Would Be More Appropriate That Independent Electors Be Chosen.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Senator Hiram Johnson issued a second statement in which he commented on the California supreme court's decision refusing a place to the Robert M. LaFollette presidential electors on the California ballot.

The LaFollette electors, denied a place as independents will go on the ballot under the socialist column.

"It would be more appropriate that independent electors should be chosen," Johnson said, "but we can assume that the independent progressive citizens of California will not hesitate to vote for electors under the socialist label when a court controlled by partisanship denies them thier constitutional rights."

POOR MAN TAKES LIFE

A. W. Pruen of Omaha Thought Dependent Over Ill Health and Poverty.

OMAHA, Sept. 29.—Despondency over ill-health and poverty is thought to have prompted the suicide of A. W. Pruen, fireman, helper at Prospect Hill cemetery, found dead with a gas tube in his mouth in his room here today.

Latonia Is Scene of Third Big Race

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Ladkin, August Belmont's 3-year-old winner of the second international special race at Aqueduct, Saturday; Epinard, the French colt who finished second, and Wise Counsellor, the western colt who was third, will be shipped to Latonia Wednesday to prepare for the third special which is to be run over a mile and a quarter on October 11.

While Ladkin won the race and the $25,000 purse Saturday, most of the glory and all of the sympathy of the racing set went to the French colt who was beaten out by a nose

Everett Haynes, the former American jockey, who returned from France to ride Pierre Wertheimer's good colt, was criticized severely for having ridden with very good judgment in both races.

While nothing official could be learned today, it is understood that Haynes will be relieved and that some other jocker will have the mount on the French colt at Latonia.

In addition to Ladkin, Epinard and Wise Counsellor, My Own, My Play, Black Gold, winner of the Kentucky Derby, Princess Doreen and Chilhowee are expected to start in the third race.

Confused. But Confident.

Washington Star: "Aren't the ideas you recently expressed a little Utopian?"

"Maybe," rejoined Senator Sorghum. "But we have people of all nationalities out our way, and a Utopian's vote is just as good as anybody else's."

NO SEPARATION IN M'CORMICK FAMILY

MR. & MRS. HAROLD F. McCORMICK

This photograph, with the words: "Here we are, but I am afraid we do not look as a separated couple—G. W." written on its back, was presented by Mme. Ganna Walska, second wife of Harold F. McCormick, Chicago "harvester king," to a Paris correspondent with the observation that whenever the newspapers have a dull day they print "a story of a split in the McCormick family." The reporter smiled, and Mrs. McCormick handed him the photograph, saying, "Now laugh that off." The Polish singer and McCormick were married shortly after McCormick had been divorced from his first wife, who was Miss Edith Rockefeller, daughter of the oil magnate.

SAYS STORY "FRAMEUP"

Matt Thies of Des Moines, Candidate for Sheriff, Charged With Assaul.t

OMAHA, Sept. 29.—Matt Theis, Des Moines private detective and democratic candidate for sheriff of Polk county, Iowa, is on his way back to Des Moines, to try to fix up his shattered political fences which were broken down by a nineteen-year-old girl whom he was bringing back to her parents in Des Moines from Tecumseh, Neb., where she had gone with a carnival company.

The girl, Martha Gruber, had Theis arrested, charging he had assaulted her in a hotel here Sunday. Theis claims the story is a "frame up" and police believe him.

Theis said he took the girl to the hotel to wait train connections to Des Moines. The girl sent word by a note to another guest of the hotel that she was being assaulted and the guest notified police.

Theis and the girl were brought to the station where the officer was released on $25 cash bond on a charge of investigation. He failed to appear in court this morning and the bond was forfeited. The girl was paroled to Rev. D. E. Cleveland. Police say the worst feature of the case is the effect it will have on Theis' candidacy when the story becomes known in Des Moines.

DEMOCRATS IN HOPEFUL MOOD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29. — A new air of confidence in the chances of electing John W. Davis to the presidency was apparent today at democratic headquarters. It came as a direct result of the standard bearer's visit here on Saturady.

Not since the pre-convention days when democratic leaders talked of 1924 as "a democratic" a slogan forgotten in the midst of the bitter fight between Smith and McAdoo for the nomination in New York—have democratic managers spoken with such assurances of tehir party's success in November.

While some more conservative democrats do not share the aggressive confidence of the candidate himself, Davis by his own enthusiasm has apparently wiped out the last trace of defeatist feeling that grew out of the New York convention and converted the party organization here into a fighting machine.

Texas District Judge Favors Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson.

HAS RIGHT TO HOLD OFFICE

Declares State Constitution Does Not Prohibit It.

Notice of Appeal Filed by San Antonio Attorney, Charles Dickson, Who Sought to Disbar Her.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 29. — Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, democratic nominee for governor of Texas, is eligible to hold that office District Judge George Calhoun ruled here today.

The ruling was made in answer to a suit filed by Charles Dickson, San Antonio attorney to keep "Ma" Ferguson's name off the ballot on the ground that the state constitution implied the governor of Texas must be a man.

Calhoun placed the stamp of approval upon the right of Mrs. Ferguson and other women to hold office under the state statutes.

Calhoun held that the state constitution does not prohibit the holding of office by women and overruled contention that he was without jurisdiction in the case.

Notice of appeal was filed by Dickson.

Judge Calhoun made a clean sweep of all contentions against the eligibility of the woman nominee in the four day hearing last week.

Outstanding was the argument that the phrasing of the state constitution prohibited a woman from acting as governor.

Calhoun held that the constitution did not specify that the governor should be a man or should not be a woman.

The Calhoun decision confirmed the office holding rights of more than 200 women now holding elective and appointive offices in the state.

LAFOLLETTE WILL SPEAK IN NEBRASKA

Independent Presidential Candidate to Appear Either in Lincoln or Omaha—Date Not Fixed Yet.

Robert M. LaFollette, independent party candidate for the presidency of the United States, will speak either in Lincoln or Omaha as he travels thru Nebraska on his return from California. Frank Harrison, LaFollette's campaign manager for Nebraska, said Monday morning.

The date of LaFollette's appearance cannot be definitely set until the date of his departure from California is fixed, but he has promised to make at least one set speech in Nebraska, according to Mr. Harrison, who will be called upon to decide between Omaha and Lincoln. Besides his address in either one of these two cities, LaFollette will hold demonstrations while his train stops enroute at North Platte and Grand Island.

The trans-continental train will stop at North Platte and Grand Island, long enough for LaFollette to make rear-platform appearances at each town.

Three national railroad brotherhood officials, here in the interests of LaFollette's Nebraska campaign, were in conference at the Wisconsin senator's headquarters here Monday. They were:

C. W. Maier, representative of President Robertson of the national brotherhood of locomotive firemen and engineers; C. A. Bolton, deputy president of the order of railroad conductors, E. L. Doyle, national auditor of the brotherhood of maintenance of way men.

These men arrived from Chicago last week and will spend the immediate future campaigning at railroad centers in Nebraska.

MOURN FOR DEAD FRIEND

LAST RITES FOR MAX WESTERMANN AT HIS HOME.

University Closes for Funeral of Finance Officer Monday Morning—Dr. Leland Pays a Tribute.

Funeral services of Max Westermann were held Monday morning at 11:15 o'clock at the home, 1535 C street. The university closed at 11 and a great throng of professors and students went to the home to show their sorrow and devotion.

The service was opened with prayer by Dr. B. M. Nyce. Mrs. J. M. Lyon of Pontiac, Ill., sister of Mrs Westermann, sang "Abide With Me," and Dr. Winifred Hyde sang "The Ship of Peace." Dr. Dean Richmond Leland read the scriptures and offered the following tribute to his friend:

"When the sad announcement was made a few days ago that Max Westermann had suddenly died there quietly passed out of this home, the university and the city, a good and true and beautiful soul —one of the choice spirits of this community.

"The news went from home to home, it passed from one to another, thru the campus and along the street, until a whole company of friends were knit together in love and sympathy. In this brief moment let us pay our reverent tribute to him.

"His faithful service in the administrative department of the university has been well stated in another connection. Outside his official position he was always rendering valued service in some form of welfare work. During the war his tender love for childhood found expression in his work for the fatherless children of France. Thru painstaking correspondence and careful organization as secretary and treasurer he made a distinguished record for the Lincoln branch of the organization, and a medal issued by the French society bestowed upon him is a token of his distinguished service. There are hundreds of mothers and children in France today who, if they knew their unknown friend, would rise up and call him blessed.

"His home was his very life, and he lived in the atmosphere of it as much as possible. I know of an old-fashioned house in a far-away college town in which a faithful teacher of German lives. Over the stone doorway is this inscription:

Das Liebe Haus, Das Beste Haus."

"The sentiment of this quaint motto would well characterize the

NO HOPE FOR LAFOLLETTE

SENATOR HOWELL ASKS WHY WASTE VOTE ON HIM.

Junior Member of the Upper House Returns to Nebraska to Begin Campaign for Coolidge.

R. B. Howell, junior senator from Nebraska, arrived in Lincoln Monday and in the afternoon went to York where he opens his speech-making campaign. Mr. Howell is greatly interested in agricultural problems, and will discuss these very largely in his speches

Mr. Howell says that there is not the slightest chance of Mr. LaFollette wining the necessary 262 votes that would make him president. Davis is sure of the solid south and to give LaFollette 262 out of the remainder would leave for Coolidge so small a number as to be ridiculous to suggest.

The fight is between Davis and Coolidge. He will support Mr. Coolidge, and will advise his progressive friends to do the same, giving the reasons theerfor as he addresses them. He does not believe it is an effective use of the vote to cast it for LaFollette in view of the hopelessness of his campaign, and he is advising that voters choose between Davis and Coolidge.

Asked as to what he thought the outcome would be if the contest went to congress, the senator said he did not think that the matter would be very long in getting settled. He feels sure from his present knowledge of the situation that it would result in the selection of either Coolidge or Dawes.

TEXAS CATTLE BARRED

An embargo against the shipment of cattle from Texas to Nebraska has been issued by Secretary Shumway of the state department of agriculture, approved by Governor Bryan. Reports of foot and mouth disease in Texas caused this action Montana is said to have issued an embargo and other states are expected to follow. While reports from Texas indicate that the foot and mouth disease came into that state from South America, many are disposed to believe it may have come from California.

Secretary Shumway said no new outbreak had been reported from California since August 27. He believes the disease in that state has been wiped out.

Nebraska was one of the states that permitted shipment of sheep from portions of California for purposes of slaughter but declined to modify the quarantine to permit shipment for feeding purposes.

NEW POINT IS RAISED

SAYS AGAINST CONSTITUTION TO CHARGE INTEREST.

Stockman Asks Supreme Court to Rule That It Is a Government Function Only and Illegal.

Olaf Qualett, who operates a large business in stock dealing in Nebraska and Illionis, appealed to the supreme court Monday from a decision of the Boone county court that he is dleinquent in interest payments on about $38,000 worth of mortgages, and ordered his 240 acre holding there sold to pay principal an interest.

Qualett's attorneys are seeking from the supreme court a ruling on a defense they have interposed to the effect that any effort on the part of private owners of capital to exact interest from persons to whom they loan money is a usurpation of the functions of the federal government, and that congress only has the power to charge interest.

Qualett is engaged in an interstate business, and he says that he is charged 6 and 10 per cent interest in Nebraska, while in New York, Maine, Illinois and Iowa money is loaned for half that figure. He says that charging him more in Nebraska than in other states is illegal because it places a burden on interstate commerce, forbidden by the constitution. Congress can fix rates, but it cannot delegate the power to state legislatures.

He takes the position that to charge more than 1 per cent interest a year is a direct burden on interstate commerce. Five sections of the constitution are declared to be broken by Nebraska's effort to fix interest rates. Two of these have reference to interstate commerce burdens and depriving a man of his property by charging him interest one prohibits the coining of money by anybody but the government; another is that no state shall pass a law limiting the privileges and immunities of citizens of other states, and the other relates to equality under the law.

Qualett says that it is against the common interest and the general welfare to charge interest, and he wants it cut off the judgment and he be given judgment for what he had already paid

BRYAN JOINS FLIRTATION

AIDS DAVIS IN QUEST OF LAFOLLETTE VOTE.

Attempts to Show Progressives They Can Hope for Nothing Except Thru Democratic Organization.

Governor Bryan was asked upon his return home from Chicago Monday what he meant in an interview in which he said the LaFollette-Wheeler independent ticket was not considered "opposition" from a democratic standpoint. In view of the recent defense of LaFollette by John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president, the governor's remarks have been construed as evidence of a flirtation instituted by the democratic leaders to win the good graces of LaFollette supporters.

Governor Bryan explained that the LaFollette opposition in agricultural states is opposition to the Coolidge administration because of what that administration had done to depress farming interests, that senators from northwestern states are not supporting the republican administration and in congress are voting the democratic ticket, democrats being in favor of legislation for the farmers.

"The democratic organization is the only one thru which the progressives can hope to obtain what they want," said Governor Bryan.

He said Nebraska has one senator who is not supporting the republican administration.

In Chicago Governor Bryan took notice of the report that he had been called there for reprimand from the democratic national organization for not taking a more active part in the national campaign. He denied this statement, but upon his return had no announcement of speaking dates outside of his home state. He said he expects to make some speeches prior to October 16 when he talks at the dedication of the Yankton, S. D., bridge. He expects to deliver some addresses before that time in the middle western states.

Governor Bryan may close the campaign with addresses in Nebraska, but this is not determined. He expects to spend the last two days in Nebraska and would like to speak in Lincoln the night before election day.

While in conference with headquarters in Chicago Governor Bryan said he suggested speeches in Nebraska during the campaign by Senator Owens, Senator Gore and Daniels, formerly secretary of the navy. He had previously issued a special invitation of W. G. McAdoo to speak in Nebraska. In reply he received this message:

"Warm thanks for your telegram. I deeply regret impossible for me to take such an ambitious campaign trip as you outline. Long absence from my office in California makes my early return imperative. Within limitation of my capacity I shall do all I can to help."

TWO SEEK PAY FOR ACCIDENTS

Suits Totaling $20,500 Filed Against Fred D. Britell and Lincoln Traction Company in District Court.

Two personal injury suits, totaling $20,500 were filed in the district court Monday forenoon. Albert Campbell in his $10,433 action against Fred D. Brittell, alleges that he was attempting to walk across Twenty-seventh street at C street, May 2, 1924, he was run down by a delivery truck owned by the defendant and driven by Charles Clouse, an agent.

Mr. Campbell complains that the truck was being driven in a negligent, careless and unlawful manner and at a high rate of speed. He stated that the force of the collision threw him to the pavement, bruising, injuring lacerating the muscles, lignaments and nerves of the right side of his body and head.

Andrew A. Dingman, in a petition asking a $10,000 indemnity from the Lincoln Traction company, alleges that he was employed by the railroad company to guard the crossing at Twenty-seventh and S streets and to give warning of the approach of trains. He states that on August 22, 1924, he was standing on the crossing, waving a red flag, giving warning of the approach of a train, when a street car, disregarding the ordinance providing for a stop before crossing all railroad tracks, struck him and knocked him to the ground, severely injuring him. He claims that because of the nature of his employment, he had a legal right to be on the tracks and that the Traction company thru its motorman is guilty of negligence

CHALLENGE IS REFUSED

SHALLENBERGER WON'T DEBATE WITH HIS OPPONENT.

Has All Engagements Made for Himself and Doesn't Want to Furnish Opponent With Audiences.

No more of that joint debate stuff for the Hon. Ashton C. Shallenberger, congressman from the Fifth district and democratic candidate for re-election. Back in his earlier career he consented to debate with George W. Norris, and he always ascribes his defeat to that moment of weakness, as he thinks the 182 majority Norris got would never have existed if he had hoed his own row.

A few days ago Former Congressman Andrews, his republican opponent, in a letter telling Mr. Shallenberger that he was not telling the voters the truth, suggested a joint debate. Now comes the congressman and says that he is too busy, that maybe Andrews finds it difficult to get an audience and anyway why not go hold a joint debate with himself. The letter follows:

"Replying to your letter of September 24, in which you state that there is a demand from the voters of the district that you and I debate the issues of the campaign at a series of joint debates, I will say that the idea has never been suggested to me other than in your letter.

"However, the itinerary for my entire campaign has been laid out whereby I have engagements to speak practically every day and night up to November 3 when I am to address a meeting at the Hastings auditorium. My committeemen thruout the district have and are proceeding with the arrangements and the advertisements for these meetings. So you will see I could not cancel them for a new program of joint debates.

"In the many years in which my case has been presented to the voters of the Fifth district, it has always been my custom to go directly to the people with the reforms I advocate. I prefer to continue to submit by legislative record to the voters in this way and my efforts in the last session of congress are open for their verdict.

"I note in your letter your defense of the Esch-Cummins law and the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill. It was to be expected since you voted for and championed both of those laws so adverse to Nebraska primary advertisement that you now favored the repeal of the Esch-Cummins law, "it having served its purpose." Since its only purpose and effect was to give to the railroads an enormous and unfair advance in freight rates I suggest that you arrange a debate between former Congressman W. E. Andrews who voted to fasten the Esch-Cummins law upon the public, and Candidate W. E. Andrews who now professes a death bed repentance when faced with defeat because the voters' verdict was that he voted in congress in the interest of the railroad corporations rather than in behalf of the people whom he represented.

"You are at liberty to present your own case at your own convenience to your own followers. Perhaps you have felt the necessity of some additional advertisment as a drawing card for your meetings."

Broken hatch covers and part of the pilot house of the Clifton were picked up by Captain Dalton Hudson of the steamer Glencairn, according to word received here

IT'S GRANDPA ROGERS NOW

Eight Pound Grandson Comes to His Daughter Who Eloped With a Count.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29. — A reminder of the run-away romance of Millicent Rogerts and Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten wailed lustily at Miss Lippincott's private hospital here today, where "Mother and son are doing well."

Presumably father is, too, but he was left behind in Europe when Father Rogers went over after his remorseful daughter and brought her home. The count has been advised of his fatherhood, but has not been invited to the christening and friends of the family say there will be no reconciliation.

It's a boy, eight pounds and it looks like its father, Millicent said.

Mrs. Rogers said she and the colonel were happy.

Millicent, $40,000,000 heiress, married Count Salm at the municipal building in New York city, January 9 of this year. They went to Europe after the bride's father, Col. H. H. Rogers, declined to accept Ludwig and for a time danced in cabarets while the count wrote "How I Wooed and Won the $40,000,000 Heiress" for a feature syndicate. Then Colonel Rogers went over and brought back his daughter. The baby came September 27.

RENEW AGITATION FOR CITY ZONING

City Planners Also Want Wires Put Underground, and Traffic Regulated Near School Buildings.

Passage of a zoning ordinance for Lincoln before the city election next May was advocated by the city planning subdivision Monday, at the chamber of commerce, and will be urged upon the city council. This time limit was suggested so that if the matter should go to a referendum, it could be handled at the time of the regular election. Dr. C. F. Ballard of Havelock, was emphatic in advocating this action.

Putting electric wires underground, or at least taking the poles out of the downtown streets, was another measure advocated at this meeting. Prospective merger of two public utilities, making it possible to lessen the number of poles, was considered a factor in making this a good time to renew the movement. The project has been accomplished on Thirteenth between M and O streets, but at the expense of the property owners

Further regulation of traffic in the neighborhood of school building, with provisions for halting cars at all such corners was referred to the committee on that matter, named during the summer

Dr. J. S. Welch's committee on park improvement was asked to report on the situation, with regarded to action contemplated and money available this year. It was pointed out that the city charter provides for a three mill levy for such purposes that has never been appropriated, except once for the extension of the university campus.

The subdivision will recommend to the chamber of commerce board that they express appreciation on behalf of the chamber for the park gift to the city made recently by

HANDS A TIP TO SHIPPERS

DON'T ROUTE YOUR STUFF, SAYS COMMISSION.

Better Returns and Lower Rates If Signature Is Not Placed on Dotted Line of Lading Bill.

With the season for shipments of potatoes and apples in full blast, Chairman Browne of the state railway commission deems it important that shippers who sent their stuff in large lots to distant markets be given some sound advice. Unless men are seasoned shippers and well acquainted with markets and rates, Mr. Browne says that it is advisable that the railroad bill of lading line which contains instructions as to what roads the stuff is to travel be left blank. It will save money and trouble and make it easier to secure refunds if overcharges are made. Said Mr. Browne:

"Shippers who are about to move carload freight to distant points should see that the bills of lading, made out by themselves or the railroad agent, do not carry routing instructions at the time they are signed.

"This is particularly important at this time when producers, especially of potatoes and apples, are about to seek markets, sometimes at points where rates depend on the route used.

"When bills of lading carry no directions as to routing it is the duty of the railroad to handle shipments by the cheapest route, or if they do not so route, to protect the cheapest rate.

"When routing instructions are put on the bill, even by the agent, before shipper signs, it adds much to the difficulty of the shipper, or of the railway commission for the shipper, to secure refunds because careless routing."

WOMAN CAUSES SENSATION

Mrs. Mary Shank Pleads Guilty to Tarring and Feathering Dorothy Grandon.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 29 — Mrs. Mary V. Shank created a sensation in circuit court today when she pleaded guilty to the charge of tarring and feathering Dorothy Grandon, twenty, of Martinsburg, W. Va., on the night of July 24 last.

Mrs Shank fought with the Grandon girl on the state road two miles outside Meyersville and urged by men of the community, tarred and feathered her. Mrs Shank was the first of twenty one persons indicted for the "tar and feathers party" called for trial when court opened today

Sentence was suspended by Judges Hammond Urner and Robert Peters

The second accused person called was Harry C. Leatherman, station master at Meyersville. According to statements made by Mrs. Shank following her reconciliation with Dorothy Grandon it was Leatherman who was the leader of the party which applied the tar and feathers to the girl

Leatherman pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial

Miss Grandon who has been in jail here since authorities began an investigation of the tar and feather party, was present as a state's witness

IRRIGATION COMES UP

WHEELER SAYS REPUBLICAN STAND IS "MURDEROUS."

Declares Dawes Promise to Prevent Further Reclamation Projects in West Would Ruin Farmers There.

DENVER, Sept. 29.—The republican farm irrigation stand was called "murderous" by Senator Burton K. Wheeler here today.

"To say that the way to cure overproduction is to kill off a few farmers by stopping irrigation aid, is nothing short of murderous," the independent vice presidential candidate declared.

"And yet that is just what Charles G. Dawes, the republican vice presidential candidate, promised in a recent speech. He said that farmers are producing too much and that his party propsed to readjust their economic ills by preventing further government expenditures for irrigation and reclamation projects in this great west.

"That, of course, will ruin the farmers of five western states.

"The progressives will never permit such a step if they can prevent it. We pledge our just and equitable aid to develop irrigation in our great west."

Wheeler chose the irrigation problem as the striking point of his series of speeches here. He avoided the klan issue which was brought to the front by democrats here who adopted a state platform denouncing the order by name.

LaFollette's denunciation of the klan is sufficient to answer all questions on the issue which he believes insignificant when compared to economic issues like farm relief and irrigation, Wheeler contends.

Dropping his role of fighting campaigner last night, Wheeler became a preacher of the gospel and delivered a sermon on "Peace" to the congregation of Grace Community church here.

ACCIDENT VICTIM FAILING

John Oslin, of Barada, May Not Recover—Hickman Woman Not Seriously Hurt.

John Oslin, of Barada, who was injured in an auto accident east of Lincoln Wednesday afternoon, is reported to be in a grave condition at St. Elizabeth's hospital. According to Dr. W. H. Slattery, who is in charge of his care, his chance for recovery is doubtful. Lung complications have developed, according to Dr. Slattery, and he is gradually failing. Mr. Oslin sustained a dislocated spine in the crash when the car in which he was riding with George Vaughn, of Falls City, and Chauncey Deahl, collided with another car traveling in the same direction. Since the incident the entire lower half of Mr. Oslin's body has been paralyzed.

Mrs. Fred Grothe of Hickman, who with Mrs. Henry Roteschaefer and Mrs. Emma Meyer, also of Hickman, sustained a fractured collar bone when their car collided with another driven by Miss Bertha Green, of Lincoln. The other members of Mrs. Grothe's party sustained bruises and other minor injuries. All were reported to be resting comfortably at Green Gables Monday noon. Mrs. Grothe, who is past seventy-four years old, suffered considerable pain but it is expected that she will recover without suffering permanent injury.

SORROW IN TWO HOMES

CHILDREN MISSING CAUSE OF NEW YORK SEARCH.

One Gone From a Wealthy Home and One From an East Side Flat With No Clues.

NEW YORK. Sept. 29.—One of New York's "kidnaping" cases was solved today when Ellen Butwich, missing lower East Side child, was found asleep near her home.

The child said she had wandered away and was tired after playing so she "just went to sleep."

Police continued search for Franklin Roshek, missing son of a wealthy west end family, but no clues of importance were found.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Two mothers, one in the exclusive upper west end, the other in the inclusive eastside, were near nervous hysteria today, as they awaited reports of their missing children.

Mrs. Franklin Roshek, wife of a wealthy mercantile broker, sobbed in her luxurious apartment off upper Broadway for fear her fourteen-year-old son, Franklin, jr., may have fallen into the hands of kidnapers.

Mrs. Mary Butwich, wife of a poor laborer, refused the kindly ministrations of neighbors in her little flat on Monroe street, as she wailed for news of her twelve-year-old daughter, "the little red ridinghood" of the east side, who entered an automobile with two men Sunday afternoon and has not been seen since.

Police were working on the theory that both children may have been kidnaped.

Franklin Roshek romped out of the big apartment house where his parents live, last Tuesday morning, into clean streets and sunshine of the west end on his way to school. He never came home.

Ellen Butwich ran out of a narrow hallway into the crowded streets of the east side, Sunday and has not returned.

Neighbors saw Franklin talking to some strangers, rough looking men.

Neighbors saw little Ellen get into a touring car with two men.

And that is the last trace police have been able to get of either of the missing children.

Franklin Roshek is fourteen, five feet one-half inch tall, chestnut hair parted on the left side, ruddy complexion and grey eyes. He weighs about 125 pounds and wore a gray belted suit with knickerbockers when he left home.

Ellen Butwich is twelve years old, a pretty girl with blue eyes and brown hair. She is four feet tall, weighs ninety pounds and wore a red sweater, red stockings and red slippers.

TRY HARD TO SAVE LEAGUE

DELEGATES WORKING DESPERATELY TO THIS END.

World Peace Thru Disarmament, Goal Sought at the Geneva Conference, Endangered by Japan.

GENEVA, Sept. 29.—All business of the league of nations assembly was stopped today while leaders strove to find a way out of difficulties raised by Japan—difficulties which imperil the protocol of arbitration and security.

After two hours of discussion this afternoon the situation remained deadlocked and the subcommission which has the matter in hand adjourned, subject to the call of its president, while representatives of the leading powers resumed private negotiations with the Japanese.

The latter declared themselves ready to talk publicly as soon as the others chose to. A majority of the powers feel that the issue raised by Japan and the amendment to the protocol she proposes are unacceptable, but they hesitate to force the issue, lest the Japanese withdraw from the league.

What the Japanese wish to do is to prevent any nation being put beyond the league or world court when that nation shall decide that a question raised by another is purely a domestic affair.

Ambassador Adatoi wants the protocol to say that The Hague court shall decide whether the issue is domestic or international and if the latter, arbitrate.

This is seen by a majority of the delegates as a camouflaged attack upon the United States and the Japanese exclusion clause.

The Japanese, however, said they would not bring the question of immigration before the assembly, as they are preparing to discuss this with the American government.

OSAKA, Japan, Sept. 29.—The Japanese cabinet decided today to maintain an adamant attitude toward insisting upon reservations to the league of nations proposed arbitration protocol at Geneva.

Japan insists first that the court of arbitration should decide whether a question in dispute is internal or international; second, that the council of the league should recommend peace solution of a dispute even when it has been decided an internal matter.

Public opinion, including that of all important papers, supports the government.

LITTLE IRRIGATION.

WASHINGTON, (By Mail).—Less than 2 per cent of the total arid and semi-arid land in the United States is now irrigated, yet reclamation has already reached the stage where future progress can be made only thru the construction of extensive storage works or thru underground water made available by pumping.

ZANNI PLANS JOURNEY

Argentine Aviator Will Probably Fly From Shanghai to Kogoshima, Japan.

TOKIO, Sept. 29.—Major Zanni, Argentine aviator attempting to fly around the world, was expected to fly today from Shanghai to Kagoshima, Japan, if weather proves favorable.

Zanni was to have made the flight yesterday but adverse weather conditions prevented.

Elaborate preparations for Zanni's reception here have been completed. Warships have been posted to patrol the course and a military areonautic officer and mechanician detailed to render aid.

Japan is making a particular effort to extend the Argentine flyer every aid, as a mark of appreciation of the action of the Argentine government at the time of the Japanese-Russian war in transferring warships to Japan.

COP STAGES THRILLER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A regular "movie thriller" was staged when Patrolman James Connolly swung over the edge of a burning building, grabbed a panic-stricken paralytic by the wrists and held him safely until firemen effected a rescue.

MONEY MEN OPTINISTIC

MONEY CUSTODIANS LOOKING ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Declare That Business of the Country Is Now on the up Grade and That Times Are Better.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Bearing messages of optimism for the country, 8,000 bankers gathered here today for the fiftieth annual convention of the American Bankers' association. Noted speakers scheduled to appear at the four day meeting include Dwight Morrow of J. P. Morgan and company; E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture and leading bankers from all parts of the country.

Business is on the upgrade and marching right ahead, Walter W. Head, Omaha, declared.

"While a boom in business is not likely at this time, I anticipate a steady improvement in general conditions."

David R. Forgan of the National City Bank of Chicago, Richard Hawes, St. Louis banker; Charles S. Hinsch, Cincinnati; George F. Roberts, National City bank of New York and many others issued optimistic messages.

"There has been a distinct improvement in the past three months in many lines of business," Forgan said. "With the election satisfactorily out of the way I do not see any reason why this improvement should not be continued."

Business conditions generally are favorable and the European situation has improved Hawes said.

"The presidential election will soon be over and removed as a disturbing factor," Hawes said.

"The outlook for business this fall and for next summer is very satisfactory," Roberts said. "Conditions are more favorable to stability and prosperity than at any time in recent years."

Hinsch said:

"Underlying conditions are sound. Stocks in nearly every line of endeavor are low. Buying today is governed largely by the demand and merchants and manufacturers are not speculating upon the future."

Crime levies a toll of $3,000,000,000 annually in the United States, the protective committee of the association stated. Tonight the committee will urge the bankers to fight for the establishment of a state police force in every state of the union, on the ground that states with police forces have less crime than states without such protection.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: I am a young man of twenty-eight. Four years ago I married a woman whom I had known but a short time. She was pretty and attractive and wore pretty clothes. I fell in love with her and of course the end was—matrimony. But the story did not end there. A year after we were married I suffered a financial depression and she offered to get out to work and help up get on our feet again.

I didn't want her to, but consented, because she seemed hurt when I refused. In six months, she had run off with another man. I found out later that she had met him at the department store where she worked and that she often went out with him evenings, when I was out of town, as was often necessary in my work.

Three months later she returned to me and begged my forgiveness. She seemed so young and pitiful, I gave it radily and installed her in my home once more. She promised to do better and seemed a loving wife for over a year. Again she ran away from me, this time with another traveling man, whom I had brought home and introduced to her, because he seemed to be a good friend of mine.

In a short time he had abandoned her in Chicago and she sent me a wire, saying simply, "Come." I went and she asked me for money —I was in good circumstances again—and she said she didn't suppose it would do any good to ask to come back, because she supposed I'd never forgive her again.

Meantime I found out that there had been moral lapses in her family before—her mother was not what she ought to be and one of her sisters was notorious in that section of the south, where she came from. Now, if she had remained true to me, I would be proud of her but since she has deceived me twice, I don't believe I want to be fooled again.

Of course, she has written me, asking to come back, swearing she will never desert me again, that she has found I am the one good man in the world and all that line of bunk.

Do you think I should take her back? I am anxious to do what is right, but I am wondering if it will mean a loss of social standing for me to do so. I need a certain prestige in my business. I know it would be hard for me to forget, altho I have forgiven her already, feeling she is weak, but I will try if you say so.—Twice Deceived.

A. From what you tell me, there is a question in my mind if she ever would stay with you. It is not fair for her to disrupt your home every so often by running away with another man. No person is obliged to endure that sort of thing. If you have no religious scruples against divorce, I would secure one and start to build life and home anew.

Dear Mary Gordon: We are both high school students in our teens and will you please answer the following:

1. Is it proper to dance with a stranger at a dance in our home town?
2. How often should a girl allow a boy friend to call on her?
3. Is it best to go with one boy all the time or to go with different boys?
4. Is it best to go with boys who are one year younger than we?—Blue Eyes.

A. 1. No.
2. Twice a week, at most
3. Several.
4. Such a slight difference in age does not matter.

Just Me: Thank you for the offering. It will be passed on.

Linnie: It is certainly discourteous and insanitary to sneeze without catching it in your handkerchief.

Cold Cookery.

From the Manchester Guardian.

Marzipan is the most successful cake that can be made without an oven. It is very simple, requiring three-quarters of the best icing sugar, half a pound of ground almonds, the white of an egg, and the juice of half a lemon. These are mixed well together, and pressed into cakes of any shape or size. The basis of cold cookery, however, is a dough made by putting the white of an egg and an equal quantity of water into a basin, and adding about a pound and a half of icing sugar until a stiff paste is formed. This paste or dough can be flavored with essences of various kinds, colored with vegetable colorings, mixed with chocolate or cocoa, or with almonds, filberts, or walnuts. Glace cherries, preserved fruits or raisins may also be included or substituted as desired. When the dough is rolled out on the pasteboard, icing sugar should be used for dusting, just as flour is in baking. The dough soon dries, but the finished cakes improve if kept for a day or two. Quite a nice cake is made by using sugar dough and marzipan in layers. The dough could be colored and flavored with chocolate for one layer, vanilla for another and raspberry for a third. Then if the cake is decorated with a few glace cherries it should look as nice as it will taste.

FROST DAMAGE WAS LIGHT OVER STATE

Major Portion of Crop Was Out of Danger—Dry Winds of Past Week Have Helped.

Light frosts over the week end did little damage to the state corn crop a report of the division of crop and livestock estimates made here Monday, indicated. South of the Platte river the crop is 90 per cent matured and north of the Platte 75 per cent.

The report said: "Most of Nebraska's corn crop is now safe. The high, dry winds of the past week have insured a large percentage of marketable corn. About 90 per cent of the crop south of the Platte and 75 per cent north of the Platte is now safe and the immature corn is largely confined to lowlands, low areas in upland fields and corn that was planted extremely late.

"Examination of the fields reveals the fact that the crop is farther advanced than it appeared to me. In many cases, the ears with green husks are hard. However most of the outer husks are dry except on lowlands and late plantings.

"The yields will fall considerably below last year and individual fields vary greatly. This is due to poor stands, large percentage of flooded areas, ext remely weedy fields, hail and many barren stalks and small ears, particularly in the south Platte region where the dry, hot weather in August did considerable damage.

"Northeastern Nebraska has the best corn as this section was not injured much from dry weather. While nearly all the upland fields are mature most of them contain some immature corn. Corn in lowlands needs from one to three weeks to mature properly.

"It appears that considerable of the corn south of the Platte will be more or less chaffy and light due largely to effect of the drouth and high temperatures during the last half of August. Ordinarily the crop is too far advanced by the middle of August to be injured by heat and drouth but since the crop averaged two weeks late this year it was damaged.

"While the production of corn will fail far below that of last year the crop should approximate the 1918-22 average since the acreage is larger. It is very likely that the percentage of merchantable corn will fall considerably below the average."

LONDON, (By Mail)—Britannia's business of ruling the waves is gradually forcing her into the air. The old empire is as confident of her naval ability as she was in the days of Nelson, but the flight of time since Nelson's day has convinced her that a fleet on water needs weapons with wings. And that explains why, today, Britain is already more than a quarter of the way thru the aerial defense program approved earlier in the year to become officially operative on the first of next April. Political quarters have assumed all along that the scheme was designed largely as armor against France and France's growing fleet of flyers. Reliable aviation circles now reveal, however, that the fear of naval attack is primarily responsible

GRAND JURY WILL PROBE

CONFESSIONS OF POISONERS WILL BE CONSIDERED.

Intimacy With Woman Is Admitted by Tate Who Says He Stole Arsenic From Drug Store.

MARION, Ill., Sept. 29.—"Love makes a man do anything," was the explanation made here today by Robert Tate, who confessed to instigating the poison plot that resulted in the death of Joseph Harrington, husband of Mrs. Tate.

"I suppose I would do it over again," Tate remarked. "Love gets a man so."

Tate gave arsenic to Harrington and when that dose failed to kill Ruby Harrington Tate gave him another, and this time, fatal dose. A few days after the death Ruby and Robert Tate, boarder at the Harrington home, were married.

"I did not want her to take the blame," he said as he leaned back on his cot in his cell in the jail here. "I loved her too much. I wanted a sweet and pure woman. Ruby was all that a man desired. I would go thru hell for her.

"When she told me yesterday she loved me still I couldn't let her suffer alone. I suppose we got married too fast, that's what caught us. I could not wait, tho.

"I joined the Church of God for her. I got the Holy Ghost and received victory. That was the first time I went to Chicago. She wanted me to go tho.

"They let us together yesterday. All that I miss now as I set here in the jail is Ruby. I suppose we won't be together long. Both will get the rope. But when I walk up to the scaffold, I will tell the world I love her and it will come from my heart."

District Attorney L. Duty said today he would ask for the extreme penalty.

First degree murder indictments probably will be returned by the county grand jury in session here this week against Robert Tate, coal miner who made the final confession in the murder of Joseph Harrington, of Johnston City, a mining town just north of here.

Ruby Harrington Tate, wife of the victim, who married Tate just twenty days after the death of Harrington, September 3, confessed Saturday that she put peas in her husband's lunch box with the understanding that Tate at the mine where both worked would dope it with arsenic. She also confessed she gave her husband the final dose of arsenic in buttermilk.

Tate's confession, obtained after thirty hours of cross questioning by Sheriff George Galligan and his deputies, corroborated the woman's story in almost every detail.

Tate acknowledged intimacy with the woman over a period of about six months, starting when he was a boarder at the Harrington home. He said he stole the arsenic from a Johnston City drug store, but authorities doubt his story and are searching for a third person they believe guilty of complicity of the murder.

After Tate made his confession upon urgings by the woman, the couple were placed in a cell together where they exchanged endearing caresses.

FIGHTING CATTLE PLAGUE

Texas Making a Strenuous Effort to Eradicate Foot and Mouth Epidemic Without Delay.

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 29.—With all agencies, federal, state, county and local, leagued together and with Governor Pat Neff of Texas, personally directing activities, the fight against the hoof and mouth disease was launched in all southeast Texas this morning.

First steps on the program of eradication of the disease, declared by Governor Neff to have brought Texas face to face with the greatest crisis in the history of the state, will be the slaughter of nearly 2,000 head of condemned cattle, the property of Dr. William States Jacobs, Thomas C. Dunn, jr., and Perry McFaddin, prominent ranchman.

The condemned cattle are all on the restricted area on 6,500 acres, around which a cordon of guards have been placed since the disease was first discovered.

LORD MAYOR ELECTED.

LONDON Sept. 29.—With civic pomp and centuries-old ceremonial, Alderman Sir Alfred Louis Bower, was today elected lord mayor of London for the year commencing November 9, in succession to Sir Louis Nekton. There was no actual election in the popular sense, for astonishing as it may seem in these days of universal suffrage and popular elections, the citizens of the capital of the British empire have nothing to do with the selection of their chief magistrate. London's lord mayor is chosen by the aldermen, court of common council, and the "liverymen," or members of the ancient trade guilds. Usually they select the senior, Alderman Briggs, being over eighty, felt himself too old for the post and declined the honor. Bower was next on the roll.

FLYERS GET REAL REST

NO THOUGHT OF ANOTHER LAP IN WORLD FLIGHT.

Aviators Reach Home After Establishing a New Record for the Airmen of the World.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 29.—Complete rest, with no thought of weather conditions, faced the American army around the world flyers as they awoke today after having officially completed the first aerial girdling of the globe.

The airmen reached Seattle Sunday afternoon, five months and 22 days after the start on their sensational flight. Their landing was in the nature of a reunion. Major Martin, first commander of the flight, whose plane crashed in Alaska, was among the first to greet them.

Leaving Seattle April 6, the flyers traversed 28,000 miles and touched 21 countries, 25 states and one territory of the United States. They were in the air approximately 350 hours, made a total of 57 hops, averaging 483 miles each.

When the round the world flyers arrived at Seattle after a flight of approximately 28,000 miles completed in 175 days and five hours, another American achievement was added to the already long list of triumphs in aviation.

Other famous records established by American aviators include:

World speed record, Long Island, November 4, 1923, by Lieut. A. J. Williams, at 266.59 miles an hour.

Non-stop trans-continental flight, Long Island to San Diego, May 2-3, 1923, by Lieutenants Kelly and MacReady in 26 hours 50 minutes 3 seconds.

World endurance records both for time and distance (refueled in mid air.) San Diego, August 27-28, 1923, by Lieutenants Lowell Smith and J. Richter, in 37 hours and 15 minutes 43.8 seconds, 3,293.26 miles.

Dawn to dusk trans-continental flight, New York to San Francisco, June 23, 1924, by Lieut. R. L. Maughan, in 21 hours 45 minutes.

There Is a Reason

This world is full of proverbs, maxims, adages culled by wise men who tell their long experiences in short sentences.

They are not new. You know them. Especially common are:

"The apparel oft proclaims the man."
"Clothes make the man."
"Dress changes the manners."
"Dress better, feel better."

And many others. Every book of proverbs, every collection of wise sayings, give many pages over to advice on being well dressed

There's a reason. Wise men for centuries have appreciated the wisdom of an attractive appearance and have known:

That appearance is a mirror that reveals the man.

That dress is a table of human contents.

That polished brass passes more readily than rough gold.

That royal dignity is made by garb—that robes make a king and rags a rogue.

That the pockets of good apparel are filled with Ambition, while only Indifference clings to shoddy attire.

That good appearance breeds Confidence and a poor garb gives birth to Suspicion.

And all Wise Men are agreed that the first maxim is

THREE HURT IN ACCIDENT

HICKMAN PEOPLE INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION.

Mrs. Fred Grothe, Mrs. John Roteschaefer Badly Hurt and Mrs. Emma Meyer Slightly Bruised.

A report from Green Gables early Monday morning said that the accident victims spent a fairly restful night. Mrs. Fred Grothe suffered a little pain from the broken collar bone but Mrs. Roteschafer and Mrs. Meyer were able to sleep several hours.

Mrs. Fred Grothe, who lives a mile and a half east of Hickman, suffered a broken collar bone and bruises, and Mrs. Henry Roteschaefer, aunt of Mrs. Grothe, living near the Grothe farm, was badly bruised about the head, and Mrs. Emma Meyer, sister of Mr. Roteschaefer, was bruised about the breast when the car in which they were riding was struck by a car driven by Miss Bertha Green, 2501 R street, at Fifty-third and A streets at about 6 p. m. Sunday. The Roteschaefer car turned over pinning all but Mrs. Meyer under the car. Passersby helped to extricate them.

The injured were taken to Green Gables sanitorium by passing autos where they were given medical attention. Dr. K. J. S. Hohlen, who attended them said that Mrs. Grothe is seventy-four years old and her injuries may be more severe on account of her age. Mrs. Roteschaefer was bleeding at the ear Sunday night and Dr. Hohlen said it could not be determined how badly she was hurt. The small child of Mr. and Mrs. Roteschaefer and Mr. Grothe and Mr. Roteschaefer escaped injury, with the exception of scratches.

Mr. Roteschaefer said the persons in his car had been to Elmwood to visit and were on their way to Hickman when the accident occurred. They were going south on Fifty-third street and Miss Green was driving west on A. As they neared the center of the intersection the car driven by Miss Green came upon them so quickly that they were unable to get out of the way and it hit the back end of the car.

Car Turns Over.

The Roteschaefer car turned over, pinning all underneath it, with the exception of Mrs. Meyer who was thrown clear. Mrs. Roteschaefer, who was in the front seat, had the baby on her lap and when the car went over she clung to it and protected it in such a way that it suffered nothing more serious than some bruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Grothe who were riding in the back seat were both caught under the car. Passersby helped lift the car from the persons underneath it, Mr. Grothe and Mr. Roteschaefer both being pinned down so that they could not help themselves. Miss Green took Mr. Roteschaefer in her car to the sanitorium. The Roteschaefer car was badly damaged.

"It happened so quickly that I couldn't tell how it happened. I was going west on A street and the auto was going south on Fifty-third," said Miss Green. She said that neither car was going very fast. She stated that she was so badly shaken up by the accident that she could not talk further about it.

LAD FATALLY SHOT WHILE HUNTING

Clifford West, Fifteen, Killed Nearly Instantly When Gun Discharges While He Is Climbing Fence.

Clifford West, fifteen years old, was killed nearly instantly at about 4:30 p. m. Sunday while out hunting on the G. M. Clark farm, nine miles north of Lincoln on Fourteenth street. A double-barrelled shotgun which he was carrying was accidentally discharged while he was going over a fence. The charge entered his body below the left arm and entered his left breast. He is the son of Mrs. Jennie Norse, employed at the state hospital.

"It was an accident, plain and simple," said Deputy Sheriff Cecil Ward, who made an investigation immediately after the tragedy. The body was removed to Splain & Schnell's parlors where it is being held pending funeral arrangements.

Three other boys were with young West and witnessed the accident. They are: Jacob Hergrader, sixteen years, son of Henry Hergrader; Peter Dittenber, jr., fifteen, son of Peter Dittenber; John Hermance, thirteen, son of James Hermance. The farm where the tragedy occurred is in charge of Christ Noble and owned by G. M. Clark. Young West was employed there as a farm hand. His companions were sons of neighboring farmers. They said that the quartet went hunting about every Sunday.

URGES LEGION TO ACTIVITY

State Commander Courtney Outlines Program for Ex-Service Men of State.

KEARNEY, Neb., Sept. 27.— To bring the American Legion membership in Nebraska up to 25,000, to make the national convention to be held in Omaha next year the greatest gathering of the Legion in history, to further interest every post within the state toward assisting the veterans' bureau in carrying out the hospitalization and rehabilitation program, to carry out provisions of the state relief fund and to further the program of Americanization already adopted, with particular reference to getting out a representative vote in the fall election, were the keynotes of an address made by State Commander C. M. Courtney, before the local Legion post last night.

Hospitalization and rehabilitation, in the opinion of the state commander, should be fostered by every post, that the latter should assume the responsibility of seeing to it that every ex-service man in its district, if afflicted with tuberculosis or other diseases contracted during the period of service, be examined and listed for rehabilitation. Such examination must be made before January 1, 1925. He appealed to every post in the state to assist the veterans' bureau to operate more efficiently, to work on a 100 per cent basis. "If we give such support and then the bureau fails to meet the obligation entrusted to it, we shall be free to criticize. Over 1,300 ex-service men received shelter, food and hospitalization, in emergency cases and every post should see to it that men worthy and needy are taken care of."

He made an appeal to all Legionnaires to exercise their right of franchise. "Get out and vote, and then put in a little time getting the other fellow out. We don't care for whom or how they vote, just as long as they do cast a ballot and thereby make this a government of, for, and by the people."

BURNED TO DEATH WHILE IN HIS BED

Emil Larsen of Fremont Loses Life in Flames of Unknown Origin Late Saturday Night.

FREMONT, Neb., Sept. 28.—Emil Larsen, fifty-six, was burned to death in his bed late Saturday night when fire of unknown origin ignited the bedclothes while he was apparently asleep.

Larsen lived at the home of his mother in Fremont, Mrs. Gustave Larsen, who is past eighty years of age. She was in the front part of the house and knew nothing of the tragedy until the firemen arrived in response to summons from neighbors who had discovered smoke issuing from the window of Larsen's room in the rear of the house.

Various theories are advanced as the cause of the fire. A kerosene lamp near the bed may have been the cause altho the lamp was standing on the table in good condition when the firemen arrived. Traces of oil on the bedclothes are also apparent, it is reported, and an inquest to be held within a day or two may offer a solution.

Larsen is survived by his mother, a wife and six children. He was divorced from his wife about four years ago and since that time she has been living with four of the children in Omaha. Two of the children reside in Fremont.

The Larsen home was but slightly damaged by the blaze but the bedclothes were destroyed. Larsen's body was charred nearly beyond recognition.

North Carolina Man Charged With Wiping Out Family of Five.

CONWAY, N. C., Sept. 29.—The fourth trial of Edwin Bigham, accused slayer of five members of his family, was resumed today in Horry county court here after several days' recess caused by the death of a state witness who was stricken while on the stand.

Bigham, who has escaped the electric chair on three previous occasions when his attorneys made successful pleas for new trials, is being tried on the specific charge this time of murdering his brother, L. S. Bigham.

L. S. Bigham's body, with a revolver clasped in one hand was found with the body of four members of the Bigham family near the home at Florence, S. C., in January, 1921. It was first believed by authorities that he killed the other four, then shot himself.

LOW MARK IN SOME PLACES

LOUP CITY SHOWS TEMPERATURE OF TWENTY-FOUR.

Broken Bow and Oakdale Report 25 Degrees While Southeast Nebraska Escaped Hard Freeze.

Low temperatures were reported at a number of Nebraska stations Monday morning according to the weather bureau, the lowest being Loup City with 24 degrees and Broken Bow and Oakdale with 25. Lincoln's report showed 34, with the probability that a light frost visited parts of this county during the early morning. The effect on foliage, however, was not marked. Slowly rising temperature with the probability of a light frost tonight was the prediction of the weather bureau.

Low temperatures reported to the weather bureau from state stations follow: Ashland and Auburn, 31; Culbertson, 28; Columbus and Grand Island, 27; Fairbury, Fairmont and O'Neill, 29; Hartington, 30; Hastings, Lincoln and Valentine, 34; Holdrege, 33; North Platte, 32; Omaha, 40; Red Cloud, 26; Tekamah, 35.

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 29.—Frost was heavy here this morning, tho the lowest temperature recorded was 36. Practically all the corn here was past the danger point, so the damage, except to fall flowers and late garden crops, is extremely small. Some corn in the Platte valley suffered.

OMAHA, Sept 29—Light frosts Sunday morning and this morning failed to damage the corn crop in eastern and southern Nebraska, according to early reports today. The lowest temperature here was 40 degrees, at 6 o'clock this morning. Lincoln reported 34 degrees.

A heavy frost killing tender vegetation was reported all over north Nebraska, the temperature at Norfolk being 26 degrees. Opinion differed as to whether corn had been hurt or aided by the frost. Western Nebraska generally reported a heavy frost, but the damage to corn was not known this morning.

NORFOLK, Neb., Sept. 29.—With freezing temperature all over northern Nebraska Monday morning, opinion differed as to whether or not the corn crop has been damaged or benefited by the frost. The official reading in Norfolk was 26 degrees which followed a temperature of 31 degrees Sunday morning.

What great American's name can you spell by using all the above letters?

The answer will be given tomorrow. Answer to Saturday's puzzle HERON. (Copyright, 1924 Public Ledger Co.)

County Agent R A. Stewart was inclined to think that many fields of corn would be benefited as the freeze would stop growth and speed the ripening process. Late fields in the lowlands would be damaged, however, he said.

FIX NEW RATE SCHEDULE

Hardy Telephone Company Secures Order Giving It a 7 Per Cent Return.

The Hardy Telephone company, which has been charging a dollar a month for all classes of service, was given permission by the state railway commission Monday to charge the following schedule: Business, $1.50; residence, $1.15; farm, $1.15; extension sets, 50 cents; extension bells, 15 cents. The controlling interest in the company is owned by L. V. Hunter, and the remainder of the stock is held by Hardy people. The only dispute between the subscribers and the company was the amount of the business rate, it being conceded that the company was entitled to more revenue. It desired a $2 rate for business. This the commission did not allow.

The new rates, the commission says, will enable the company to make 7 per cent interest on its investment. This is the limit for the next two and a fourth years. The company is ordered to set aside $166.67 a month in order to take care of the property and set up a reserve to pay for future replacements.

BLUEBERRIES FAIL.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 29.—A Brockton man who has a summer home at Plymouth decided to try the experiment of raising his own blueberries. He bought half-a-dozen plants, at a cost of $3 each, set them out, and awaited results with expectations that were not to be wholly fulfilled. Only two of the six shrubs matured and one turned out to be a gooseberry bush, the other a maple tree.

CAN YOU SOLVE—

The Mystery of the Second Victim

(One of the World's Greatest Detectives Did)

After dispatching several telegrams, John Wilson Murray, chief of the Canadian secret service, devoted the balance of the day to local investigations bearing upon the murder of John Bryan and the strange actions of his widow who had been found halfclothed and apparently out of her mind shrieking over and over again the single word "Amer." The police believed that she was trying to accuse some American workmen from the nearby border of having killed her husband, but Murray was not of that opinion

The ground around the Bryan house had been trampled so that it was impossible to pick out any distinguishing footprints, but Murray noted the presence of a sort of sticky red clay, entirely different from other earth nearby. The houses close to the Bryans' were, the chief of the secret service found, occupied by families named Connoly and Reynolds, but the receipt of a wire late that night caused him to smile rather grimly as he tucked it into his pocket.

"Get your men," he said to the local chief of police, "and surround both the Reynolds and the Connoly places, but do it quietly. I don't know which house holds the men I want, but I am going to find out in a hurry"

When Murray left the Connoly farmhouse, after a short stay, he shook his head and motioned to the house occupied by the two Reynolds brothers. The moment the door opened the dominion detectives slipped in and, before either of the men had had a chance to say a word, he demanded: "Which of you is John Amer and which is James?

"There's no sense in showing fight," he added. "I've got my hand on my gun and this place is surrounded by a score of police officials. There's no use lying, either, for I know all about the feud that existed between you and the Bryans years ago in another part of the country, why you were forced to leave and why you came here under an assumed name, only to find that you were next door to the man you hated. But you overlooked the chief witness, Mrs. Bryan. She saw the murder and it was your real name that remained burned upon her memory when everything else had been wiped out."

There was a moment's pause before Murray continued: "As the final proof," he added, "there's a gob of bright red clay, such as is to be found only in vicinity of the Bryan house, on the sole of each of your boots"—and he left the other details connected with the "American mystery" in the hands of the local officials

The Mystery of the Second Victim.

Mrs. Giberson was not a woman given to nerves, but her voice shook more than a little as she recounted the events of the previous night when her husband had been killed almost before her eyes.

"I was downstairs," she said, "cleaning up the supper things Jim was asleep in the front room, upstairs I heard the kitchen door open and, as I swung around, I saw two masked men running toward me. Before I had time to scream one of them grabbed me and the other gagged me with a napkin that he got off the sideboard. Then they tied me up with a piece of clothesline and I heard one of them go upstairs A moment later there was a shot and—oh, it was terrible!"

"Did you see the men leave the house?" inquired Ellis Parker, detective of Burlington county, New Jersey, who was investigating the case.

"Yes, they left thru the back door after getting the $600 that Jim had hidden upstairs."

"The smaller of the two stayed down in the kitchen, evidently to guard me," the woman answered. "Just after the sound of the shot, the man with me called out 'What did you shoot him for?' and the other replied, 'Because he was waking up' After they left I worked and worked at the clothesline until I finally got free, ran upstairs, found that Jim was dead and then summoned the police"

Ellis Parker had difficulty in repressing a smile. He knew, beyond the question of a doubt, that the woman was guilty. Her own story convicted her at least of a complicity in the crime.

Can you spot the flaw in her evidence? Can you see, as Parker did, why Mrs. Giberson could not have been telling the truth?

The answers to these questions will appear tomorrow.

DEATH FOR CRIMINALS

SAY EXTREME PENALTY HAS BIBLE SUPPORT.

Lutherans Certain Capital Punishment Justifiable and Should Be Imposed Where Life Has Been Taken.

CHICAGO. Sept 29.—(United Press.)—Declaring that capital punishment is "legal and backed by scriptural authority," the Chicago Lutheran conference of the Missouri synod, largest of the Lutheran bodies, today issued a statement quoting the Bible in support of the death penalty.

To offset the arguments of those who, opposing the death penalty, quote the Bible in support of their claims, the statement quoted:

Genesis 9, 6—"Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made He man."

Lev. 24, 17—"And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death."

Romans, 13, 4—St. Paul—"He (the ruler, the government), beareth the sword (the instrument of capital punishment) not in vain; he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him, that doeth evil."

Jesus—"They that take the sword, shall perish by the sword."

Romans, 13, 4—"If thou do that which is evil, be afraid, for He (the ruler) beareth the sword not in vain."

Romans, 13, 3—"Rulers are not a terror to good works but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power?"

"A most baffling situation confronts today," says the statement. "On the one hand heinous and atrocious crimes are being committed in ever increasing numbers. Crimes that outrage and shock every righteous citizen; on the other hand we hear of persistent agitation for the abolition of capital punishment and a plea for mercy to the criminals."

Surplus of Sorrow.

This world is amply stocked with woe, so don't increase its store; if you spread sorrow as you go, pray do that stunt no more. We spread fierce stories in the mart as we pursue our way, and they distress some neighbor's heart, and spoil his happy day. Elijah's mantle we assume, our forecasts darkly run; with prophecies of grief and gloom we spoil the people's fun. We talk all day of grievous pains, of aches in knees and shins; and men who hear our mournful strains cast off their cheerful grins. Contagious is the brooding frown that we are prone to wear, one grouch will queer a happy town and fill its streets with care. One mournful wight with tear wet face, and hair and garments torn, will sow to salt the marketplace and make its people mourn. In many homes there is no sound of honest, wholesome mirth, because Tired Father sits around and scowls for all he's worth. In countless stores there is no trace of pep among the clerks because the boss's frozen face has chilled the whole blamed works. Let us be cheerful as we wend adown life's little slope, let's bring our wailings to an end and talk of joy and hope.

Mrs. Muehlberger Says Words Cannot Describe Her Suffering Before She Tried Tanlac Treatment.

"Befre taking Tanlac I only weighed 115 pounds and was so rundown and weak I couldn't do my housework. But I now weigh 164 and am strong and well, just as my friends all say I look," is the striking statement of Mrs. Mary Muehlberger, 803 S. Millwood Ave., Wichita, Kans.

"Words just can't fully describe what I suffered from indigestion, smothering spells, nervousness, headaches, dizziness and backache I had no appetite, could eat no meats, and the least exertion would wear me out.

"But Tanlac has done entirely away with all this indigestion, nervousness and worry, and now my health is as fine as I could ask. It certainly is a remarkable contrast between my condition now and two years ago and Tanlac has my unstinted praise."

PLAN INQUEST IN DEATH OF PEKLO

Examination Shows Woodman Circle Auditor Met Death by Blow on Head, Fracturing Skull.

OMAHA, Sept. 29.—An inquest is to be held Tuesday into the death of Frank Peklo, auditor for the Woodmen Circle, who disappeared mysteriously a year ago, and whose body was found in the Missouri river at the mouth of Little Pappico creek by hunters Saturday night.

An examination showed that Peklo had met his death by a blow on the head which fractured the skull. The fracture was in such a position that it could not have been caused by a fall, Dr. Samuel McClenaghan, who performed an autopsy Sunday said. The fracture was at the base of the brain, and a bad one, Dr. McClenaghan said. He said he believed the fracture was caused by a blow from some blunt instrument and is certain that Peklo met with foul play.

Peklo was last seen at 5 a. m., October 30, 1923. He had left home with his shoes unlaced and no overcoat when his father telephoned that his store had been robbed during the night

He never reached the store and never was seen again. Police have always accepted the theory that he had run across the robbers, recognized goods taken from the store and been slain by the robbers in an attempt to stop them. His shoes were laced when the body was found.

The robbers who ransacked the store, carted away merchandise valued at $2,000. They evidently operated with a large automobile truck or made several trips to the store with a smaller one, police said.

Peklo's mother died from grief two weeks after her son's disappearance.

An examination of Peklo's books at the Woodmen Circle proved that they were in good shape and no reason for voluntary disappearance could be found Charles Peklo, a brother, insisted on the inquest because of whisperings that Frank had done away with himself

"VIOLET RAY" IN POOL.

ANNAPOLIS, Sept 29.—When the new swimming pool at the naval academy was opened, Admiral Henry B. Wilson issued orders that women were not permitted to swim in it The officers' wives and their friends were to use the old pool But the word was passed about—and it reached the ears of the admiral—that a certain young woman has been in the pool, not once, but frequently. And the admiral started an investigation. It was quickly called off when he found the "young woman" in the pool was none other than Violet Ray—a means used to cleanse the water.

DICKY MEETS A WEE LITTLE RUN-A-WAY.

"GRACIOUS on us," Dicky laughed as he spied the clusters of bright yellow flowers, "You look just like the buttons on Mama's tan dress!"

Happy Giggles, the wee elfin from Make-believe-land, hopped up from the grasses at Dicky's feet. "They certainly do look like the buttons on Mother's tan dress. I guess that made Mrs. Tansy feel quite proud to hear you say that. How about it Mrs. Tansy?"

The wind swayed the feathery leaves and Mrs. Tansy nodded her little yellow button-like blossoms.

"Indeed, it does make me happy," she laughed. "For some folks have given me the name of Bitter-buttons, you know. I suppose because my blossoms resemble buttons."

"Bitter-buttons!" Dicky exclaimed, "Why bitter?"

"Oh dear," laughed the elfin, "because they leave a bitter taste in one's mouth when one chews them. You know in Europe this little flower is quite well thought of. They take the blossoms, these very same yellow buttons, and steep a brew that is supposed to cure most every ill."

"Yes, and the ladies take my leaves and soak them in buttermilk for nine days and use them on their faces and hands," laughed Mrs. Tansy. "Of course, I don't know whether it really does any good or not, but they claim it makes them fair."

"But how did you get out here on the roadside?" Dicky asked. "I know Mama has some of your relatives planted in her garden."

"That's just it," and Mrs. Tansy dropped her head, "Way last Spring one day I heard Mr. Robin telling Mrs. Rose about the lovely meadows where the brook bubbled and I longed to go and see that meadow, so I very foolishly crawled through the fence, and here I am, not much farther than I was. Now when it's too late I wish I was back in your Mother's garden again. There every morning and evening she used to give me a nice, cool shower bath. Now, I never get a taste of water unless it rains. But that's just what I deserve for not being contented I'll never run away again if I ever get back."

"My goodness," laughed Dicky, "If you really want to be back in the garden I'll dig you up and put you back with your friends."

"That would make me very happy," sighed Tansy. "I shall never be foolish again. Isn't it funny how folks are never satisfied? They always want something they can't have? Well, I'm cured and I'll never run away again."

Dicky found a stick and with Happy Giggle's help transplanted Mrs. Tansy and, if you happen to pass Dicky's house some day, just run in and take a peek at her. She has the prettiest yellow buttons on her green leafy gown you ever saw and ask her what she thinks about little folks who want to run away. I'm sure she will be glad to tell you.

The Puzzling Problem Madge Faced About Hugh Grantland.

HUGH GRANTLAND insane! That keen intellect clouded, that magnificent physique dominated by the hirelings of an institution for the care of the mentally sick!

I could not believe it, and yet for the first few minutes following my reading of the wild strange letter I had just received from him, I could imagine no other explanation for his sending me such an epistle.

For it was the intense passionate screed of a youthful schoolboy, whose ideas of romance are gained from fiction. Surely no man of Major Grantland's age and experience could or would have penned so fervid a message if he were in his right mind.

Those references to his approaching and inevitable death also! How strained and incoherent they appeared when I read them over for the second time. I knew Hugh Grantland to be extremely brave and resourceful, yet these expressions of his were far more fitted to the lips of a trapped victim of a third-reel cinema, than they were to those of a stern, poised army officer.

There could be no other explanation, I told myself with a saddened heart, as I took up the letter again.

And yet——

As if the touch of the written words beneath my fingers had been a signal for the drawing aside of a memory curtain, there began to unroll before my mind's eye a crowded, swiftly-moving reel of pictures in which Hugh Grantland was the central figure, and among them I saw the shy, wistful, boyish expression which I long ago had detected beneath the army officer's experience-etched features.

A man in years and ability, he was an inexperienced, romantic, idealistic boy where women were concerned. It was not egotism, but observation backed by years of experience in dealing with young people which made me realize the eternal boy in Hugh Grantland, and know that he spoke the truth when he had once told me that there never had been any woman in his life save his mother, long since dead.

That he had idealized me, I was sure, and remembering his shyness, his awkwardness in the little social amenities which are second nature to men like Dicky, Alfren Durkee and Harry Underwood, who have been thrown much in feminine society, I dimly began to see that there were circumstances under which he conceivably might have written just such an unreal letter as the one that lay before me.

Is Hugh Mad?

But this hypothesis meant that he really faced death, as his letter had said, was perhaps even now out of the world which had held such heights and depths of experience for him—the room suddenly seemed to grow colder as I realized what a blank in my life Hugh Grantland's going would mean.

Except for Lillian I have no stancher friend, and I shivered at the thought that I might never more know the sense of safety which had been mine because of his unobtrusive watchful care of me.

Which was the true answer to the mystery of this bizarre letter? Had Hugh Grantland gone mad or were they true—these almost unbelievable things he had written to me?

I felt as if I were facing a blank wall with the inquiry, and feverishly I turned again to my memory pictures of Hugh Grantland, wondering if I could find in them any tiny clew to the strange thing confronting me.

I remembered my first impression of Hugh Grantland, when he—a tall rangy youth in an army officer's uniform—rescued me from the brutal discourtesy of a trolley conductor. I had marked then the odd combination of boyish shyness and awkwardness with veteran ability and resourcefulness which he possessed. But it was the thrilling spy-hunting adventure into which we were thrown and his spectacular rescue of me following, that had intensified my appreciation of his unusual qualities.

"Ma-ma Where Are You?"

Then I had realized that he was the Captain Grantland—it was later that his major's commission came—hero of unnumbered exploits in France where he had gone to join the Foreign Legion in the first days of the World War, and subject of many a newspaper feature because of his odd history.

Born of wealthy parents, his childhood had been as restricted in some ways as it was indulged in others. He never had been allowed to go to school, had been sent to college directly from an elderly tutor's hands, and in his second year he had been expelled for some reason that had never been divulged by the college authorities. His mother's heart had broken, his father's had been turned to stone.

Implacable he turned the boy away from home, and from that day to one a number of years later when a quiet youth entered the service as a day laboror of a rival railroad to the one his father headed, there was a hiatus in Hugh Grantland's life which he never had explained, and which never had been ferreted out.

His rise in the service had been phenomenal, and though his father could keep the boy away from his mother's deathbed, he could not keep her private fortune, no inconsiderable one, from going to him.

Hugh Grantland had given up both wealth and his high position when he went to the war, and though the wealth remained, he never had gone back to the railroad, choosing rather to serve his country in ways that were as unobtrusive as they were effective.

Did the answer to his odd screed lie in that service?

Was he perhaps paying penalty for his patriotism?

It was with the sensation of suddenly being summoned from sleep that I heard my small son's voice calling me from the corridor:

"Ma-ma! Ma-ma! Where are you?"

THE HOME KITCHEN

Here Are Some Big Secrets of Making Delicious Sauces

By WANDA BARTON

SAUCE making is an art. A good sauce often redeems a plain dinner and makes it an event.

A sauce must be smooth and perfectly made and served hot or cold as called for—never half and half. Perfect seasoning is absolutely essential. If the sauce must be kept hot until served, set the saucepan in a vessel of hot water to hold it at the right temperature. If cold it should be chilled in the icebox and offered at the last minute. A small double boiler is excellent for saucemaking and should be kept for this purpose.

Frontenac Sauce.

This is for a fish salad. Mash the yolks of four hard boiled eggs with four anchovy filets. When blended add a half cupful of olive oil a little at a time, a saltspoonful of paprika, a teaspoonful of minced celery leaves, a tablespoonful of minced chives, a teaspoonful of onion juice, a saltspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of taragon vinegar, two teaspoonfuls of well washed capers, and a teaspoonful of sharp pepper sauce. Mix well until perfectly blended. If the sauce seems a little too thick a tiny bit more vinegar may be added.

Olive Sauce.

For stuffed steak. Put a large can of tomatoes into a saucepan with a cupful of stock, a sliced onion, a few stalks of celery, a sliced bud of garlic, a few sprays of parsley, half a bay leaf, pepper, salt, a slice of bacon, a half teaspoonful of curry powder, and a dessertspoonful of sugar. Cook gently for a half hour stirring frequently, then strain through a fine sieve. Reheat and thicken with brown roux to the consistency of cold honey. When done add a small cupful of olives cut in rings. Serve hot turned over the steak, or in a hot sauceboat.

Cider Sauce.

For boiled or baked ham. Take a pint of brown sauce, made exactly the same as the olive sauce, and add to it a half pint of cider and cook steadily until reduced to the proper thickness.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A House and a Home

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

THERE are houses and houses, and in these houses there's sometimes a home. "A dwelling house" is the phrase, I think, used in describing many places, and it is an apt phrase. Many houses never become homes, but I have known a real home in two tiny rooms. It is the soul of the dweller that makes a real home in two tiny rooms. It is the soul of the dweller that makes the home.

It is hard to tell exactly what it is that makes a home, you may say, yet we all know it the moment we breathe the atmosphere of a real home. Certainly it isn't the cooking which tells, although we hear no end of talk about home cooking, and, by the way, there is more than one meaning to "home cooking." Good home cooking is the best in the world, but as the leaves of the tree must be counted bad cooking of all sorts.

There is an old saying that the devil inspires the cooks of the world. This may be true of professionals, but even the inspiration of the evil spirit is lacking from those who make soggy pies and puddings, and cook vegetables the wrong way. No, there can be a good home even with not so very good cooking. If the Mother Heart is there, there's the makings of a home.

Inspiration Is Needed

I remember in childish days a certain Aunt Mary who was the delight of the hearts of all children who knew her. It was at her home where we most enjoyed life. The stories she told us, the songs she sang to us, the wreaths of flowers she showed us how to make, and all the charming lore of nature she taught us. How to make curls out of dandelion stems and to tell time by the dandelion gone to seed, how to make dolls out of poppies—a hundred things she told us in the gardens and fields.

But when it came to sitting down at Aunt Mary's table, things weren't so fine, so the grown ups said. We children never noticed any shortcomings connected with Aunt Mary's housekeeping. She had us so closely gathered up in her heart of hearts that we missed nothing in the material world when we were in her presence.

It is such women, not at all ideal housewives, who make ideal homes. I suppose this is heterodoxy of the most serious kind, for in these days of efficiency, every woman is urged first of all to have a spick and span house and a table so inviting and appetizing that her husband is always home to dinner as a matter of course and all the neighbors are compiling notes of recipes from her books.

Efficiency is a great thing everywhere. It must not be spoken of lightly, nevertheless it has not so much to do, after all, with a happy home. Unselfishness and the desire for the comforts and happiness of all in the house, that is at the root of a real homemakers' programme.

Sometimes I think we forget the essentials in urging a beautiful home life. It is not always understood how much depends upon the inspiration. The children who sit delighted listening to a mother's stories—be they fairy tales are stories of her own youth—are happy. Their happiness is reflected in the very walls of a home, so that when a visitor goes in she feels an instant impression of restfulness and delight and pleasure.

Is This the Difference?

The house, no matter how inviting it may be, cannot become a home unless it has the maker of a home in it. If there's a real Home Mother, well and good, and if a real Home Father, better and better, for of course it takes two to start the home. If it is a small home it seems to have a special blessing for those born and brought up in it. Did you ever think how true it is that most of the great men of the world have been born and brought up in small homes?

We start like the rivers in tiny rivulets and gradually broaden out from small beginnings. What is it the old song says:

"Home is where the heart is," and this line may help to tell the difference between houses and homes.

Be Natural If You'd Be Beautiful

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

WHETHER or not the natural type of beauty is the fad of the moment is a question, much discusssed at the present time. This does not refer to personality and manners, for these questions have beendecided long ago. The woman who swoons on the least provocation has long since passed from the scene. It is much smarter to be engagingly natural and to let our manners be a natural expression of our feelings.

But the problem of complexions is one which needs more discussion. It has not been so many moons since the face served more or less as a mask, a mask on which the wearer expressed herself with the aid of paint and powder and lip-stick.

While these things still hold their important place, I must say that they are used to-day to effect a different purpose. They are coming more and more to be used in the cause of naturalness. That is, they bring out the points of true beauty, they accent the values which have already been placed there by nature.

All this must be brought about by exercising the greatest care possible in our choice of cosmetics. If you are an up-to-date person, you will follow this cue for all it is worth.

For instance, when you select a face powder choose one that blends in with the general tone of your complexion. If you happen to have a naturally creamy skin, or one bordering on tan, don't buy white powder. Don't buy it even if you have a great desire to be pale and interesting, for this pallor is not natural to you.

On the other hand, if you are pale and want to be darker-skinned, don't think that deep powder will successfully bring about the transformation you wish. Be natural and wear the powder that comes nearest being just the tint of your skin.

The same rule applies to lip stick and to rouge if you must use them. Choose these with particular consideration for your natural coloring. If your lips are not naturally a deep red, don't buy a lip-stick that is blatantly red. Choose one that simply accents the shade of color that your lips already possess.

The natural complexion is a real work of art. A French beauty specialist tells me that American women have particularly good natural complexions, and that this very gift seems to make them careless in their treatment of their complexions. He says a blonde will often choose for her delicate skin powder that only a brunette should use.

Remember that there are dozens of powder shades and if you search with care you can find exactly your shade.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl twenty-one years of age and have several young men friends.

But there is one that I care more for than all the rest.

He always was very nice to me, and called on me often. But the last time we were out we had a little misunderstanding, and he stopped calling.

But he speaks well of me to my friends, and when I meet him he speaks to me but doesn't ask for a date.

Now what can I do to resume his friendship, or do you think he has another girl and doesn't care for me anymore?

HEART BROKEN.

HEART BROKEN: You might take a chance and ask him to come to see you some evening when you are having other friends visit you. If he does not accept your invitation, you will know definitely that he no longer cares for your friendship.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and have been going with a young man two years my senior. I love this young man very much and he seems to care a great deal for me. People have told him my parents object to having him visit my home and he has stopped coming. What is the best way to make him believe he is welcome to my home? My parents don't object to him coming.

He recently went with a girl who has a bad reputation. How can I gain his love and keep him from going with this girl. I don't ask him to give up his friendship with other girls because we aren't engaged, but I don't want him to go with her because she has a bad name.

2—Is it correct for [illegible] to [illegible] his home as his sister [illegible] mother have invited me several times?

KATINKA

KATINKA: 1.—You might write and invite him to come to see you some time when you are entertaining other friends. If your parents are cordial to the young man he ought to be able to tell for himself whether they welcome his visits or not. I do not think it advisable for you to say anything to him directly about going out with the other girl. He might think you meddlesome or even jealous. But you could tell him indirectly what you think of other young men who go around with girls of questionable reputation. If he knows of this girl's reputation, he will in all probability understand what you mean, and if he does not know about it, it would be best for you to let him find out for himself.

2.—Yes.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Annie Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

YOUR HEALTH

Why So Many Persons Often Have Sore Throats

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND.

WHY do so many people have sore throats? Almost every day you meet a friend who is complaining of one. Why is it?

To understand the frequency of this ailment you must know something about the anatomy of your throat. You must know first that the main supports of the neck are the backbone behind and the muscles of the sides and front. These muscles are in play all the time you are awake and under some conditions while you are asleep.

On each side of the throat is a tonsil. This may be a well-behaved and normal tonsil, or it may be a great big, sponge-like structure punctured with pockets and fissures.

Lining and covering all the irregularities and surfaces of the throat is the mucous membrane. Like mucous membrane everywhere else it is found in the body, the covering of the throat has its glands.

These glands are tiny things, but they are very necessary for our comfort. Some of them supply a watery fluid and others furnish the thicker mucous. When they work as they should the tissues are kept moist and slippery, so that the throat feels right, and when you have occasion to swallow the morsel of food slips gayly along into the gullet.

If you open your mouth and look in the mirror, you can see the back of your throat, provided your tongue is not unruly. When the tissues are normal the back wall of the cavity is seen to be lined with a pink membrane. This region is known to the doctors as the back pharyngeal wall.

It is of interest to all human beings because, under certain conditions, the glands of this portion of the mucous membrane may become inflamed and swollen. Then there are red, pimple-like elevations on the pharyngeal wall. These are spoken of as "enlarged follicles" and, when they are present, the throat is sore, and swallowing may be extremely painful. Pressure of any sort on these inflamed follicles is painful.

Enlargement of the pharyngeal follicles is always associated with mouth breathing, and often with excessive use of the voice. On account of the latter association, this condition is often spoken of as "preacher's sore throat."

Whenever the pharyngeal part of the throat is involved in acute inflammation the pain is apt to be described as a "raw and scraped" feeling. When it is at its worst the throat feels as if it had been peeled and salt had been rubbed into the raw surface.

First, there is an uncomfortable sensation which may not be so bad as to keep you awake the first night. By the second night the pain is at its worst and you may not sleep at all. By the third evening you are better and after four or five days the trouble disappears.

It is pretty safe to say that such attacks as I have just described are due to indiscretion or neglect. You have to be "run down" to get this kind of a sore throat.

Perhaps you have spent several nights on a sleeping car or in some other badly-ventilated place. You may have exposed yourself by riding in the face of raw winds or dust-ladened air. You may have smoked excessively.

Neglect of the stomach and bowels is another important factor. Overeating and particularly the presence of constipation must be regarded as possible causes.

To-morrow I shall tell you more about sore-throat and what to do about it.

Answers to Health Questions

Double Lapels Distinguish This Beige Kasha Coat for Early Fall.

THE new Fall coats adhere, for the most part, to straight lines. Collar treatments come in for a large share of fashion interest.

The coat sketched here is of beige kasha, trimmed with mink. Note the deep double lapels which extend down to the waistline.

The frock worn beneath is of brown satin. The hat, with its jaunty bow at the neck, is also of brown satin.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

Although this promises to be a very lively day, according to the prevailing lunar as well as mutual aspects, yet it may be one calling for much wisdom and discretion. The disposition may be aggressive and resourceful, but will likely encounter many disagreeable situations. The money and business should be kept well under control and all desire for change or travel should be suppressed until a more fortunate time. The health should be kept in order and social pleasures should be discreet.

Those whose birthday it is may have a lively year but one of troublesome situations. Keep the business and money well in hand, avoid travel and change and attend to the health. Also be not too indulgent in pleasure and society. A child born on this day although being lively, enterprising and resourceful may encounter many difficulties and temptations in life.

AN HOUR WITH DAWES THE DYNAMIC

DAWES SAYS CAMPAIGN FOUGHT IN PRIZE RING NOT IN FEATHER BED.

His party will win if it gets the votes out—and the way to do that is to start a fight. So says Charles G. Dawes, G. O. P. nominee for vice president.

Politicians were alarmed when he criticised the ku klux klan.

"What's the objection to discussing what everybody's talking about?" Dawes demanded. "They say I'm out of place in this campaign. Huh! I'm not out of place in any campaign where the constitution is believed in. This is a fight. The republican party has been challenged by LaFollette who would alter the American constitution. The republican party can win if it gets out the votes, and the way to get out the votes is to start a fight. This campaign is going to be fought in a prize ring, not on a feather bed."

This is the fourth of a series of close-up interviews with the leading presidential and vice presidential candidates written exclusively for the Journal and the North American Newspaper Alliance. An interview with Charles W. Bryan will appear Tuesday and one with Burton K. Wheeler on Thursday.

By Paul R. Leach.

"There can be no reaction to the right that is not the right reaction."

There, in a few words, is contained a large part of the philosophy of Charles Gates Dawes, republican nominee for the vice presidency. The epigram that is destined to become famous in this campaign was General Dawes' response to a newspaper correspondent's question as to reactions following that part of the candidate's speech at August, Me., condemning the ku klux klan.

Right! That in one word is the Dawes creed. Right is right, in his estimation, and he will take plenty of time to prove to you, should you care to enter into an argument about it, that might is not right, never was and never can be.

He is a man of considerable wealth, residing in one of Evanston's mansions. Of colonial American stock he had ancestors of renown, and his wife is a descendant of General Israel Putnam. He is a chairman of the board of directors of the Central Trust company of Illinois and director and large stockholder in many corporations. Yet General Dawes is distinctly a man of simple tastes. And he is perhaps the most talked of man in the world because of his work on the so-called Dawes plan to bring about the economic peace of Europe. Even this, however, does not constitute his sole claim to wide recognition for eminent services performed. The governmental business of the United States is now conducted for the first time in its history upon a budget plan. Charles Dawes passed a year in Washington doing that piece of work. Then there is the big task so ably performed by him of keeping the American army in France in supplies of all sorts.

His Physical and Mental Vigor.

Charles Gates Dawes was born Aug. 27, 1865—so now he is fifty-nine years old—at Marietta, Ohio. He looks much nearer forty than sixty, especially when telling a story, and he is a cracking good story teller. He is extremely active, mentally and physically. Whatever he is doing, that thing is uppermost in his mind.

He was educated in the common schools of Marietta and at Marietta college, where he was graduated at the age of nineteen. Working as a civil engineer, he earned money to put himself thru the Cincinnati law school.

But he has more education now than either of these schools could possibly give. For instance, he taught himself music, never having had lessons from a teacher, learning first to play a flute, then a piccolo, which instrument he played in the Marietta band as a youngster; then came the piano. He has composed numerous airs, several of which were orchestrated in Chicago a few years ago. One piece he composed was taken up by Fritz Kreisler as a popular part of his concert repertoire and renamed by Kreisler "Melody in A." Mr. Dawes is extremely shy of the artistic side of his nature and resents the publication of stories about him as a composer, but he is pleased at honest appreciation of any of his compositions.

Meeting Ground of Future Great.

After graduation from law school young Dawes went to Lincoln, Neb., to practice law.

"Why did you choose Lincoln?" he was asked.

"Had an uncle there, just been elected governor of the state," Dawes replied. "Thought that would be a good place for me."

"Was it?"

"Well, it was profitable in the friends I made."

There was a restaurant operated by a man named Don Cameron, where pretty fair food could be had at 25 cents a meal. Dawes ate there. At the same time a young army officer named John J. Pershing, recently assigned from West Point to teach military tactics to the Nebraska state university undergraduates, often ate at the same place. That was the beginning of the friendship of Dawes and Pershing which brought Dawes to the post of purchasing agent for the entire American expeditionary forces during the world war.

Friendship for His Opponent.

William Jennings Bryan and his brother Charles were also patrons of Cameron's. Dawes and they became good friends. A few days ago some one made a disparaging remark concerning Charles Bryan. Dawes was quick to resent it. "Charles all right," Dawes [illegible]. "I've known him long enough to be certain that though his methods of campaigning may be different from mine he's [illegible]."

CHARLES G. DAWES.

Better known to the public for his "Hell and Maria" than as the composer of the "Melody in A."

At Lincoln the farmers were being discriminated against by the railroads. They engaged Lawyer Dawes—because they had little money and Dawes' fees were not high. They wanted government regulation of railroad rates, and the fuss that Dawes kicked up ultimately resulted in the formation of the interstate commerce commission.

About that time Dawes returned to Marietta and married Miss Caro D. Blymer.

"I'd been told that a fellow could get along on $80 a month," says the general. "But it took pretty close to $100. Mrs. Dawes was a mighty good manager, tho, or we'd never have squeaked thru."

Public utilities began to loom to far-seeing men at that time as among the great industries of the future. Thru his legal connections in Lincoln, Dawes became interested in gas companies. In 1894 he moved to La Crosse, Wis., deserting the law business for good in an overnight decision. He organized the La Crosse Gas company, became its president, then moved to Evanston. Business men of Chicago, knowing of his work at La Crosse and Evanston, kept their eyes on him. Samuel Insull was forming his group of public utilities. The Evanston company was purchased at a fat figure, becoming the nucleus of the Public Service company of northern Illinois. That was Dawes' first big financial cleanup. His public utility holdings alone are said to be worth close to $5,000,000.

How He Went into Politics.

In Marietta, when one asks about General Dawes, one will get a biography of Rufus R. Dawes, the father of Charles Dawes. The former commanded the Iron brigade in the civil war. William McKinley had been an army comrade of Gen. Rufus R. Dawes. In 1896, tho he was only a young fellow and a newcomer, Charles Dawes organized the state for McKinley and won an endorsement. He became the youngest member of the republican national committee's executive body. McKinley, elected made Dawes comptroller of the currency.

His characteristic method of doing what politicians call "raising hell with things generally," became known nationally then.

Dawes personally is very neat. An illuminating story is told of him during his administration as comptroller. Often there came calls from President McKinley for Dawes. When such a call reached him, he always washed his hands and face. He was asked why, when the calls were very urgent, he took time to visit the wash stand.

"Well," Dawes drawled, "in Europe when one is summoned before the chief of the country's administration he puts on short pants, fusses up generally, and in some places even puts on a powdered wig. Now we don't do anything like that here. But the least I can do when summoned by the president is to go with a clean face."

When Dawes returned to Chicago, he was invited into running for the senate. That was in 1902. He was unmercifully beaten, and there was [illegible] many [illegible] crossed" by Boss William Lorimer. Dawes returned to Chicago from Springfield with Malcolm McDowell, his political manager and J. L. [illegible], now [illegible] who was then his secretary. The next morning [illegible] Dawes [illegible] heard somebody whistling merrily. McDowell was curious. Who could be so gay in that office [illegible]

[illegible]

"we had raised three times the amount of money required."

Tragedy of His Son's Death.

Two children were born to General and Mrs. Dawes; a son, Rufus Fearing Dawes, and a daughter, Carolyn, now Mrs. Melvin B. Ericson of Evanston. While at home on vacation from Princeton university a day or so before he was to return for his senior year the boy, Rufus, was drowned in Lake Geneva. That was on Sept. 6, 1912. Charles Dawes life had been built around his son. Dawes expressed some of his emotions in a tribute he wrote, which was read by a clergyman at the funeral.

"My boy was imperious. He recognized no superior on earth, and yet was the tender and intimate friend of the weak and the humble. I have taken him with me among the greatest in the nation and looked in vain for any evidence in him of awe, or even curiosity. He has taken me asking me to help them, among the poor and lowly of the earth."

Besides his written words, General Dawes constructed another memorial to his son.

"Rufus and I had talked it over for a long time," Dawes said to this writer, "and his ideas concerned the building of a hotel in the west side district of Chicago where men are down, but can be helped out. When my boy passed, I carried on the work that he wanted done."

Caring for the Unfortunate.

That work was the construction of the Rufus F. Dawes hotel and the organization of the Rufus Fearing Dawes association. The hotel can care for five hundred men a night with bed and bath, each paying a very nominal sum. A similar hotel was built in Boston by Dawes.

"We've had nearly 2,000,000 guests since the Chicago hotel was organized," he said.

In memory of his mother, Mary Gates Dawes, he built the Mary Gates Dawes home in Chicago, where working girls of no parental residence in Chicago may have homelike quarters.

General and Mrs. Dawes are not society folk, don't care a hang for it. To judge by estimates that have been made to me of their personal charity and pension lists it would seem that their principal idea of assistance to their fellows is helping those less fortunate than themselves. But even among their closest friends and relatives they do not say what those charities are.

Their two foster children, Dana McCutcheon Dawes, twelve, and Virginia Dawes, ten, are the delight of the neighborhood in Evanston, not alone because they are naturally popular youngsters but because thru them the Evanston boys and girls find Charles Dawes a playmate who [illegible] from west of the tracks who has tramped more than once over to Sheridan road and inserted himself into the games and contests that Dawes is forever organizing for them, says he is nothing short of a regular guy."

In his big brown house Mr. Dawes has a beautiful library including many original manuscripts.

"Since 1912 I have spent most of my leisure here," General Dawes [illegible]

[illegible]

Breaking Into the War.

[illegible]

him. Among others he appealed to Samuel M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western railroad, the director of transportation.

"I'm going!" he said repeatedly to B. F. Blye, his secretary for many years at the bank. "I'm going if I have to sneak off and carry water for the mules. Sam Felton's got to say I'm an engineer. Sam Felton can do it."

And Sam Felton did. Dawes had his commission as major. He joined the 17th regiment, railroad construction engineers, and went to France.

Pershing was organizing the A. E. F. Dawes had scarcely landed in France when he was put on Pershing's staff. But did Dawes get a soft job there? Not on your life. Pershing didn't have any soft job men. Dawes became general purchasing agent for the A. E. F.

A story leaked out not long ago that concerned the smuggling of some mules across the Pyrenees from Spain, sympathetic to Germany, to use by the army in France. General Dawes was asked if it was true that he smuggled out the animals.

"Huh!" he grunted. "Had to have mules. We broke every law in Europe to get supplies for our armies, and just totally ruined red tape at home. But we got supplies."

Dated for More Work.

Following the armistice he was made a member of the liquidation commission, which engaged his attention until August, 1919, when he returned to his bank. But he did not remain there long. President Harding insisted that he become first director of the budget and Dawes accepted on condition that he be permitted to resign after a year. When the budget job was finished he returned to Chicago and said he'd never again be in public life. But President Coolidge thought differently. Dawes was virtually drafted to sit with the international committee of experts to work out a solution of the problem of after-war reparations.

Dawes returned to Chicago a few months ago and soon was drafted again, this time by the republican convention.

Dawes and his underslung pipe and his cuss words are pretty familiar to the American people. Upon his return from France Dawes was called to testify about war costs before the senatorial investigating committee. He was questioned about expenditures in the A. E. F. until he finally got mad.

"Hell mari!" he barked. "I'd have paid horse prices for sheep—if they could have pulled artillery!" They let Dawes alone after that.

But his profanity is of the harmless variety. Much of the published reports of Dawes' cussing is smart aleck writing by inexperienced reporters. He carries a stenographer on tour now, and has a complete record of every word uttered in public.

On the Ku Klux Issue.

That Maine speech had the politicians of his party scared to death, for Dawes criticised the ku klux klan.

"What's the objection to discussing what everybody's talking about!" Dawes demanded. "They say I'm out of place in this campaign. Huh! I'm not out of place in any campaign where the constitution is believed in. This is a fight. The republican party has been challenged by LaFollette, who would alter the American constitution. The republican party can win if it gets out the votes, and the way to get out the votes is to start a fight. This campaign is going to be fought in a prize ring, not on a feather bed."

Constitutional government campaigns are nothing new to Dawes. He started eighteen months ago to organize the Minute Men of the Constitution, an Illinois non-political body, to see that opponents of constitutional government in either party were defeated at the polls. The first big battle came in the Cook county judicial election, November 6, 1923. Organized labor sought the defeat of Judge Denis E. Sullivan, democrat and Judge Jesse Holdom, republican, because they had issued injunctions in labor cases. They were re-elected.

His Views on Labor.

During his state campaign for the Minute Men he spoke to many assemblies in which organized labor members were prominent.

"They came to me, lots of them," says Dawes, "and told me that they were for constitutional government. 'We're labor men, and will continue to be so, but we're not for labor skates,' they said.

"I know what labor wants in this country. It wants a square deal," Dawes added. "The men do not think as their professional leaders think. My appeal is to the individual. The leaders are not the custodians of the men's consciences. We've got to have respect for law in this country—no [illegible] of men going peacefully on their way to their work. How [illegible] labor men realize this and they respect it."

"What's your philosophy in this campaign?" General Dawes was asked.

"Well, where [illegible]

The average increase in financial returns traceable to the use of purebred sires was 48 per cent on 331 farms surveyed by the United States department of agriculture recently. The profitable results are due largely to the fact that a purebred sire gradually improves an entire herd or flock. Thirty-one farmers will exchange their scrub dairy bulls for purebreds this October in Nebraska. They will begin reaping the 48 per cent extra profits. The thirty-one purebreds have been furnished by thirty-one of the dairy breeders of the state. The Burlington is running a dairy sire special train over its lines and the exchanges are to be made from that train. The Nebraska Dairy Development society, the agricultural college, the dairy breed organizations, and the business men in each of the towns in which the train is to stop are assisting with the great movebent to emphasize the value and importance of a good sire in the dairy herd.

AITKEN TELLS OF EUROPEAN TOUR

England Faced With Housing Problem; Germany Not Pleased With Dawes Report, Speaker Says.

Rev. Walter Aitken of St. Paul's church, who recently returned from an extensive tour of Europe where he has been studying conditions for the past three months with the American Fellowship Group, spoke to sixty members of the social service club at the Grand hotel Monday, concerning his observations.

In England, he stated, the unemployment situation is quite as bad as it has been pictured and the labor government is now faced with the problem of not only furnishing food for the unfortunates bu thouses as well. The British liquor interests are fighting prohibition, now on its merits, but because it is American.

The military situation in Europe is better, he stated. There are now 400,000 less men under arms han in 1913. In speaking of Germany Rev. Aitken stated that they were not satisfied with the Dawes plan, but that it was their best offer yet and they were anxious for it. The Germans paid for the wair by internal loans and on top of this they must pay an indemnity. France borrowed the money and has not yet paid the interest, he stated, and the debt is now larger than the national wealth of France.

Rev. Aitken was the only speaker on the program. Mrs. T. F. A. Williams, president of the club, presided over the meeting.

BIG BATTLE ALONG LINE

FIERCEST CONFLICT OF MODERN CHINA IS WAGED.

Chi Hsieh Yuan's Troops Hurl Back Chekiang Forces Who Made Gains in Saturday Surprise Attack.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 29. — The fiercest battle of modern China's history raged along the entire Shanghai front this afternoon. Apparently it is the final phase of the local conflict.

Chi Hsieh Yuan's troops attacked first, hurling back Chekiang forces who made gains in a surprise attack Saturday, but before long the battle assumed such intensity it seemed both sides were on the offensive.

Artillery, bombing planes and machine guns fire kept up a terrific bombardment that shook Shanghai.

Lu Yuan Hsiang claimed advances at Kiating and Malu, while the Kiangsu forces were hammering at Liubo, aiming to capture the Woosung forts.

The liner Empress of Austrialia, lying at Woosung, was hastily brought up the river, fearing a naval attack. Nanking warships were pouring shell fire into Liuho.

The casualties were terrific and the stench of unburied dead twelve miles from Shanghai drifted penetratingly over the city. A plague was threatened.

American destroyers were rushed back to Woosung and sailors enjoying shore leave were ordred to their ships at once.

Landing parties were on the alert and the Kiangsu attack aimed at a sector guarded by the Americans.

Chekiang troops who gained ground in an unexpected attack Saturday were beaten back and all positions retaken, bringing the battle lines nearer to the city.

Just when it seemed that Chi Hseih Yuan's anticipated drive on Shanghai was well under way, however, a heavy storm interfered with artillery movements.

WHEELER IS CRITICIZED

EXCITED STRANGER ACCOSTS SENATOR AT STATION.

Congressman Lundeen Intervenes to Prevent Scene as Candidate Boards Train in Lincoln for the West.

As Senator Burton K. Wheeler, independent party vice presidential candidate, was boarding his train at the Rock Island depot late Saturday night, an excited young man appearing to be about twenty-five years of age, crowded up close to him.

"I resent statements you made tonight, and I'm going to hold you personally responsible," he is quoted as having shouted to Mr. Wheeler, thrusting his face up to within a few inches of the senator's and making wild gestures, according to members of the party.

Congressman Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis, standing nearest to the young man and Mr. Wheeler, stepped between them and shoved the offender to one side. Lundeen is a big man, as big men go, and had little difficulty in separating the stranger from Wheeler. The congressman attempted to settle the difficulty diplomatically, and altho the stranger refused to listen quietly, he milled around only a few minutes, and then disappeared.

When Senator Wheeler talked with the man later, before the train departed, he said that statement against Charles Dawes, Wheeler's republican opponent, had aroused his resentment, and that he had been worked up to a frenzy of excitement during Wheeler's address, which subsided after his first meeting with Wheeler at the station.

Congressman Lundeen advised Mr. Wheeler to take some precaution against fanatics who may bob up at other places during the campaign, and it was decided that the candidate would not be allowed to go unaccompanied hereafter at any time until election.

MOURN FOR DEAD FRIEND

feeling of Max Westermann for his home; for home was to him the best thing in life, and he found here the finest culture of his soul. It was his delight to bring friends under his own roof that he might share his quiet joys and blessings. From his home he went forth on errands of sympathy and beneficence. On his reading table and on these bookshelves are the books of poetry that nourished his ideals. The literature that he read developed broad sympathies; by means of other books he made excursions into fields of knowledge, not that he expected to become a technical scholar, tho he had the desires and ideals of a student. Limitations put upon his time and strength in the service of those whom he loved better than himself and whose love he made his own rendered impossible a professional career for himself. He read because he loved the truth and desired an appreciation and sympathy with the work of others. He was at ease in any academic group, and felt the inspiration and tasted the joys of the educated life.

"With enrichment of mind and heart he carried the spirit of affection and love of companionship into his wider relationships. Love is creative, and he was able to make for himself a world of friendship. He passed from group to group, on the campus and outside, finding friends everywhere.

"'One of the chief uses of this life is to make friendship for the next.' What a host of friends and loved ones whom he has lost awhile, greeted him when he entered into the new life above. How many loved ones he in turn will greet in the days that are to come.

"But in an hour like this I must speak even more intimately of him, that our hearts may be comforted by the knowledge of his Christian faith. He was reluctant to speak of such things, for he had a proper distrust of stereotyped religion. His passion for reality did not allow him to make his religion a mere outward form. One afternoon, however, in this very room sat a father, a son and a friend. The conversation turned to the definition of the essential condition of the Christian life and this father whose voice is now hushed, made in the presence of his son a statement which came as spontaneously as the bubbling of a spring, coming up out of the conviction of an honest heart and the experience of a real life.

"'The Christian life is the realization of the presence of Christ and the consciousness of union with Him,' and this is the inmost secret of Max Westermann's character, and those who were with him in these more recent months observed that more and more there was coming into his life a confidence and courage, and an exquisite tenderness that are the finer evidences of a redeemed soul.

"All we are saying here only deepens our sense of loss. May I use the same words of comfort which were spoken a few weeks ago on a similar occasion in the hearing of our friend

I know not what the future has
Of marvel or surprise
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies

I know not where his islands
Lift their fronded palms in air
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care

But Jesus knew and spake with absolute assurance

"'Let not your heart be troubled in my father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again to receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.'

"These words are true and faithful: 'Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life and may enter thru the gates into the eternal city.' * * *

"'Write from henceforth—Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. Yea, saith the spirit that they may rest from their labors that their works may follow with them.'

"The spiritual rest of heaven is the condition of the highest activity of heart and mind and will. This is the freedom of the life eternal."

The rooms were filled with flowers, sent by organizations and individuals. These will be sent to the hospitals. The crowd dispersed immediately after the services and the funeral party left shortly after noon for Omaha, where the body was taken for cremation.

QUESTIONED ABOUT BURWELL BANK JOB

Three Local Characters Say They Had Agreed to Tell the Same Story if Grilled by Officers.

John M'Graw's Giants Prepare For World's Series

SENATORS GETTING BENEFIT OF DOUBT

Washington So Nearly "in" That Plans Are Making to Send Giants to Capital Early for a Workout.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—With their fourth straight National league championship put away safely in the bag, the New York Giants started preparations today for the world's series.

The champions have the final game of the regular season with the Philadelphia Phils and Manager McGraw planned to use a lot of the rookies, who have been eating off the club during the season. McGraw, does not, however, intend to let his regulars get off edge and several exhibition games will be played before Saturday when the series starts.

Senators Practically "In."

The Washington Senators have not won the American league pennant officially but they are just as good as "in." They have two more games to play with the Boston Red Sox and they have a lead of two games. The New York Yankees have a pair of games to play with the Philadelphia Athletics. If the Senators should lose two and the Yankees should win two they would finish in a tie and would have to go thru a three game series to decide the pennant, but the chance for a play-off is remote. The Senators can cinch the pennant if they win today's game or if the New Yorkers lose their game with the A's.

The Giants apparently figure that Washington is sure to win as plans have been made to send the team to Washington, Thursday night. The players will work out in the Washington ball park Friday, according to arrangements.

McGraw is figuring on having Frank Frisch, captain of the team, and Heinie Groh, his veteran third baseman, in shape to play during the series. Frisch might have played a few innings yesterday but his manager would not allow him to take any chances. Groh, it was said, would be able to get back in uniform in a few days.

McGraw Names Probable Lineup.

While no lineup has been decided upon, McGraw intimated that he would like to use the following batting order: Groh, third base; Frisch, second base; Young, right field; Kelly, center field; Terry, first base; Wilson, left field; Jackson, shortstop, Gowdy or Snyder, catcher.

Because of his experience and his ability as a fielder, Arthur Nehf, the veteran southpaw, may be called upon to pitch the first game for the Giants He is in fine shape now. McQuillan and Jack Bentley, the former International league left hander, are also in good condition and ready for their turn.

McGraw said today he had not made up his mind about the pitcher and that the weather would have much to do in making his choice.

Giants Are Slight Favorites.

The Giants are ruling a slight favorite in the betting to win the series if Washington plays the American league end. Not much money is offered as the Giant backers are doubtful about the team if Frisch and Groh do not play.

Illinois Has Its Heaviest Team in Several Seasons

Red Grange to Play Here Saturday

Here is the youth who created such a furore in football circles in 1923. He is Harold (Red) Grange, Illinois' famous halfback, who was the force which enabled the Illini to go thru the last season undefeated. He started his collegiate football career against Nebraska at Urbana last season. He will be here Saturday when Illinois opens the Nebraska season. Word from the Zuppke camp indicates that there are several others in the line-up who will bear watching as well as Grange. Grange's record for points scored is something to ponder over. Here it is:

39 minutes Nebraska, 208 yards, three touchdowns.

60 minutes Iowa, 175 yards, one touchdown.

28 minutes Butler, 142 yards, two touchdowns.

19 minutes, Northwestern, 251 yards, three touchdowns.

59 minutes, Chicago, 160 yards, one touchdown.

30 minutes Wisconsin, 140 yards, one touchdown.

60 minutes Ohio State, 184 yards, one touchdown.

INJURED!

ROLAND LOCKE

Probably the fastest man in a football suit on any gridiron is lost to Nebraska for some time at least as a result of the injury he sustained in Saturday's scrimmage with the frosh An old ankle injury was aggravated and it is doubtful if Locke will be able to do much before the Notre Dame game.

Husker Gates To Be Locked

Coach Dawson stated Monday morning that without much question the remaining practices of the Cornhuskers would be held behind padlocked gates Those who watched the 'varsity-freshman game Saturday realize the vast amount of work which must be done if the Huskers are to make any kind of a showing against the Illini when they come here Saturday for the opening game of the Nebraska season.

Asked as to his plan of preparation for the remaining days, Coach Dawson likewise kept that under his hat

The 'varsity's showing against the freshmen Saturday brought to light all sorts of weaknesses The backs were not taking out their men in interference and the line, until the last quarter, was not charging nor was it opening up holes.

Coach Dawson and his staff have five days remaining in which to perform a miracle, namely·

George Racely and Dick Newman, former Hastings high school coach who is attending the university this winter, thoroly enjoyed themselves Saturday. Racely and Newman have been tutoring the first year eleven in the few days practice which the freshmen have had Owen Frank started them on their way but he had to go to Urbana over the week-end to scout a game there between the Illini freshmen and 'varsity.

PICK TENTATIVE ILLINI LINE-UP

Great Fight on for Position of Guard Between Brown and Miller—Freshmen Present Husker Plays.

URBANA, Ill., Sept. 29. — Roy Miller, veteran Illinois guard until he was injured in the Iowa game, has sprung into the limelight as a possibility for Miller's post and a nice contest is being waked this week

Coach Zuppke has three good tackles in Crawford, Hall and Brown Just now Zup favors Crawford and Hallfor tackles but Brown is too good a man to put into the discard Therefore, the coach is trying the Cissna Park lad at guard. Miller is no slouch ot a player and he is defending his rights

One probable lineup for the Nebraska game, as selected by the side line critics, is this: Rokusek, left end, Mush Crawford, left tackle; Bernie Shively, left guard, Gil Roberts, center; Miller or Brown, right guard, Dick Hall, right tackle and Chuck Kassel, right end. In the backfield they think will be Red and Earl Britton, Ray Gallivan and Bennie Leonard. The lineup includes four new men—Shively, Kassel, Gallivan and Leonard. If this is in Zuppke's mind these lads will have a great chance to win their spurs.

Gallivan as a possibility at quarter for this first game should not be a surprise as he has been used consistently. Zup knows what the veteran Swede Hall can do and may want to find out about Ray's ability. Leonard has had a charley-horse and is still a little slow but he may replace Wallie McIlwain who is still out with injuries.

Prospects for Heavy Team.

That Kassel will play the right wing instead of the small. Stub Muhl is almost certain altho Muhl played in several 'varsity games last year, while Kassel is only a sophomore If this lineup is final it will be the heaviest the Illini have had in years

Injuries and colds have handicapped the team a great deal and the men will have to go thru some stiff work-outs to get ready. Scrimmages will be much in order with the freshmen using Nebraska plays as reported by Assistant Coaches E. E. Bearg and Milt Olander who were present at the Cornhusker freshman-varsity scrimmage at Lincoln. Wind drills are used every night. Zuppke is frankly concerned over the Nebraska battle and is fully aware that an upset is not improbable

KRAFT'S THREE HOME RUNS SET A RECORD

FOR WORTH, Tex., Sept 29.—Fort Worth evened the score of the Dixie series by walloping the Memphis visitors, 7 to 3, in Sunday's game in which Clarence Kraft, Texas league home run king, drove in six runs with his three homers, setting a new Dixie series batting record

GOLF LESSONS.

Is it true golf is about "two-thirds mental," as many people claim? What hints would you give for maintaining the proper balance and control thruout a game?

Answered by

WILLIE OGG.

Present New England Professional and Massachusetts Open champion. Maine Open champion, 1923. Shawnee Open champion, 1921. In 1923 scored a 68 for a record over the Lido course (Long Island), reputed to be the most difficult course in the world. The previous record was 72.

Golf, in my opinion, is at least 90 per cent mental The mechanics of the game can be learned in a year or two, but the true mental attitude is the study of a lifetime.

Concentration is the key to that secret circle of good golfers A player in taking up his stance should try to blot from his mind his previous failures, that he is playing in a tournament, the troubles that abound should he stray from the line, or the mental picture of his opponent's ball lying about two feet from the pin.

TO PLAY NORTH DAKOTA.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 29 —North Dakota is coming down to open Minnesota's gridiron season next Saturday and Coach Bill Spaulding still faces the task of selecting a pair of ends for the Gopher machine. Malcolm Graham is a fixture at quarterback and Lidberg at full.

There is an island in Lake Superior which contains 132,000 acres.

Is Harold Grange Effective Only When Lugging Ball to His Right?

Walter Eckersall, the man who will referee next Saturday's Nebraska-Illinois game wonders whether Grange will be able to continue the great pace he set for himself last year. Discussing Grange, Eckersall writes in the Chicago Tribune:

"As the football elevens are preparing for the opening games of the season, some of which will be played on Saturday, the gridiron fans are wondering whether Harold ("Red") Grange of Illinois will be the tower of offensive strength to his team this year that he was last season.

"That Grange will be a marked man in every struggle, no one better than Coach Zuppke and the player himself know. Red has a hard season in front of him, and if he fails to make as good a showing as he did last year he may receive undue criticism. This has always been the case in football and Grange's general play this fall will be no different than stars of other years.

"Some coaches claim that every star football player has a weakness These same mentors contend that Harold is only effective running to his right and that he is not nearly as dangerous while carrying the oval off the left side of his [illegible] This remains to be seen, as Zuppke is too smart a coach not to teach his star pupil the advisability of being effective while running in either direction

Coaches Prepare Defense.

Other coaches assert they will stop Grange by rearranging their defense. Some say they will play their tackles wide to do the smashing and have their ends play a waiting game Others intend to move their strongest players to the left side of their defensive lines while others claim to have different forms of defense to stop the star

All of which indicates Grange will have much more trouble to make ground than last year A striking example of a star player who was unable to get away a year ago was Harry Kipke captain of the Michigan eleven Harry had been chosen for the all-American team in 1922 and as such was a marked player last year Every team Michigan met had a set defense for the Wolverine star with the result Kip did not shine with his customary brilliancy.

"Then Ohio State had Harley and Stinchcomb, and Wisconsin had Rollie Williams. Chicago had John Thomas and Minnesota had Earl Martineau. These players managed to get loose occasionally against the strong elevens and it is only reasonable to believe Grange will be sprung some time during the more important struggles.

One Getaway is Enough.

"Most coaches nowadays work on the theory, however, that if a player like Grange is used enough times he will eventually get away. In fact, Illinois may try Red fifty times, but all Zuppke wants is for him to get loose once for the points which will give his team a lead and then his eleven probably will play a defensive game

"There is bound to be a reaction on the part of any team when it is successful in stopping a player of Grange's type. After such a team thinks it has the opposing star stopped and lets down for a single play, that is the time the respected player gets away. As long as Grange is in any football game he will be dangerous and no eleven can afford to relax in its efforts to be on the alert continually for the man who possesses the ability to run thru broken fields for touchdowns.

Must Have Strong Line.

"While a lot of stress is placed on Grange, the fact must not be overlooked there are ten other players on the Illinois team which will make Grange's attempts successful

"First of all Zuppke must have a line because the best back in the world cannot make ground unless given the protection by a forward wall Harold's interference must be given credit and also the coach who undoubtedly will build plays around other players because Harold will be used as the threat at all times."

Looking Backward at Previous Illinois-Nebraska Grid Games

One of the greatest battles in the history of Nebraska football, rivalling the famous Minnesota game of '02, was the struggle between the Illinois and Nebraska elevens of 1904. After four grueling quarters of line smashing and open field strategy, the Scarlet and Cream warriors emerged victorious, largely due to the efforts of the Cornhusker's star quarter back, Johnny Bender This game was played on Thanksgiving day, November 24, 1904.

Moynihan, the husky Illinois tackle, kicked off to Nebraska, the ball rolling across the goal line. The Huskers took the ball on the 20-yard line but Benedict elected to punt on the first down Illinois rammed the Nebraska line for several gains but finally lost the oval on downs. Benedict again punted and the visitors battled their way to within the shadow of the goal posts, losing the ball on Nebraska's 6-yard line. The Husker captain punted and after a few line smashes, Moynihan tried a place kick The ball sailed wide Nebraska took the ball but Bender was tossed for an 8-yard loss on the first play. On a bad pass from center Nebraska again lost ground Benedict dropped behind the Nebraska goal line for a punt Dillinger broke thru and blocked the kick, Lonergan falling on the ball for the first Illinois score Moynihan missed goal Score Illinois 5 Nebraska 0

Bender Makes Great Run.

After an exchange of punts Bender, with Benedict running interference, ran around Rothgeb's end for 80 yards and a touchdown Bender kicked the goal, giving the Nebraskans a one point lead 6 to 5 Illinois took the kick-off and worked the ball down into Nebraska territory where Moynihan attempted a place kick The ball went wild and time was called for the first half. Score: Nebraska 6, Illinois 5

The Huskers, on a steady march down the field scored their second touchdown of the afternoon a few minutes after the third period opened. Eager crossed the goal line in the corner of the field. The punt-out was wild and Bender lost a chance to kick goal Score, Nebraska 11 Illinois 5

Illinois came to life and with Rothgeb in the leading role, began a series of line plunges which nearly spelled defeat for the home eleven Time after time Rothgeb skirted the ends for 10 and 12 yards The Illinois star finally reeled off a 10-yard gain for the second Illinois counter Moynihan missed the goal Score Nebraska 11, Illinois 10

Johnny Again Comes Thru.

When Captain Benedict left the game early in the third quarter because of injuries, many of the Husker followers gave up hopes Bender was equal to the occasion, however, for in the fourth period he took an Illinois punt and raced 50 yards to the Illinois' [illegible] line where he was tackled by Rothgeb Two line smashes failed to [illegible] the Huskers anything and Cotton was yanked back from the line Cotton made three yards and Eager crossed the goal line on the last down Bender [illegible] the goal Score Nebraska 16 Illinois 10 The lineup:

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Dividend action featured the finish in grains on the board of trade today.

In a sensational late rally wheat went into new high ground on the crop. Last minute realizing, however, shaded prices slightly. Extremely heavy reports and poor outlook for foreign crops sent the market up after a mid-day dip induced by weakness in corn.

Corn dipped sharply. Large receipts and advices from some sections that frost did more good than harm brought about some realizing.

Oats finished higher on export inquiries.

Provisions continued strong to the finish after scoring a moderate advance.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Grain futures opened generally higher on the board of trade today.

Wheat was up on resumption of heavy export buying and large world shipments. The continent, cables said, took large amounts of American grain at higher prices.

Frost damage complaints and strength in wheat sent corn up. Light to heavy frosts descended on the central and southwestern corn areas last night.

Oats advanced with other grains and some export inquiry.

Provisions started steady.

Discussing the Grain Trade.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—The Tribune says: Bullish conditions in grains, particularly wheat and rye have become more pronounced. Higher prices are talked and it would not surprise those conversant with actual conditions, if values reach higher levels than many have predicted. Grain in the leading continental countries has been so badly damaged in the field that the belief is expressed that some of it will be unmillable and it will be suitable for feed. Much damage has also been done in the United Kingdom and France. Corn is in a condition to be badly damaged by a freeze in many parts of the entire belt. Consumption of oats remains large. It is the impression of the trade that around 50% of the exportable surplus of rye has already been sold. Foreigners are taking lard more freely.

The Herald Examiner says: European buying of United States wheat continues at a big rate. Judging from recent news, foreigners have bought heavier than estimated a few months ago. Exporters say our surplus will have been sold by the turn of the year, if export trade continues at the present rate. Many in the trade figure the price will reach $2.00 some time during the season.

Grain Market Opinions.

Lamson Bros. & Co.: As long as foreigners buy wheat and rye these grains will continue strong. Corn is a weather market.

Thomson McKinnon: Recessions will offer buying opportunities.

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: Wheat still remains on the bargain counter.

Clement, Curtis & Co.: The foreign demand for wheat continues.

Bartlett-Frazier & Co.: Wheat should feel the effects of big export business. Any one who has cheap corn should keep it.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Encouragement was given financial sentiment at the start of the new week in a marked improvement in business conditions in every section of the country reported by bankers assembling in Chicago, for their annual convention. Concrete evidence of this upturn in trade was furnished by the announcement that the steel corporation subsidiaries were producing steel ingots at an average of [illegible] per cent of capacity and that the [illegible] plants were operating full time for the first time in months.

Stocks were steady in the early dealings. Trading was diminished by Jewish holidays and price changes in the main body of stocks were without significance.

Twenty Year Ticket Good.

"Tickets, please," said a conductor on the Pasadena-Los Angeles line of the Pacific Electric railway recently as he came alongside two Japanese passengers on a Pasadena-bound car. In response one of the Japanese travelers presented him with a commutation book issued by the company twenty years before, which contained three tickets marked "Good Until Used."

"Where did you get these tickets?" inquired the conductor, uncertain as to whether he should accept the ancient scrip.

"Friend of mine, long time ago he come home to Japan from this country," responded owner of the tickets. 'He gave me this book and told me that if I ever visited United States to take free ride on railroad."

In spite of the fact that the tickets were issued when ten rides could be purchased for $1 as compared with the present fare of 29 cents each, the conductor was obliged to accept the tickets.

Not Complimentary.

Harper's Magazine: The son of a Boston lawyer at the end of his first term in college exulted in the fact that he stood next to the head of his class.

"What! Next to the head?" exclaimed his father. "What do you mean, sir? I'd like to know what you think I send you to college for! Next to the head, indeed! I'd like to know why you aren't at the head, where you ought to be."

The young man, naturally crestfallen, worked so hard on his return to college that the end of the term found him in the coveted place. He went home very proud indeed.

The lawyer contemplated his son for a few moments in silence; then, with a shrug of his shoulders remarked: "At the head of the class, eh? Humph! That's a fine commentary on Harvard university!"

Men and Things

A great deal of righteous criticism is directed against the awful expense attached to a presidential election. It takes about ten million dollars to finance one nowadays, because there must be national headquarters and branch headquarters and regional headquarters each with a staff of paid workers, and orators and near orators darting here and there across the land. Perhaps, save where the money is corruptly spent—and this is a small part of the expense—it is not anybody's business if a man desires to blow in his surplus in this way, but there is a strong suspicion that for years this has been regarded as a sort of investment upon which dividends in the form of legislation and offices are expected.

They are trying out a new method of preventing corruption in elections this year, "they" meaning the government down at Washington. We forget just what the details are, but it will work just about as well as the other schemes tried to prevent persons who want to give money to finance a political campaign from carrying out their purpose. We do not care to add anything to discourage persons who are honestly trying to reform the world, but we notice that in spite of about twenty-five years legislating against them, the campaign funds grow larger each year.

About the most contemptible spectacle we can think of is that of a member of congress openingly defying the prohibitory law, and at the same time calling attention to what a brave and gallant defender of the people's rights he is. Congressman Hill of Baltimore announced that he had a lot of cider that carries more than the lawful amount of alcohol that he proposed to dispense to all friends who called, and he defied the prohibition commisioner to arrest him. The law may be silly, as he says it is when it includes cider in the list of inhibited liquors, but he and all other citizens have a way open to get rid of silly laws. Being a maker of laws, his first obligation is to respect all laws and not to flaunt at any that he thinks may be silly. The bank-robber probably regards the law he breaks as silly, but that does not make it so.

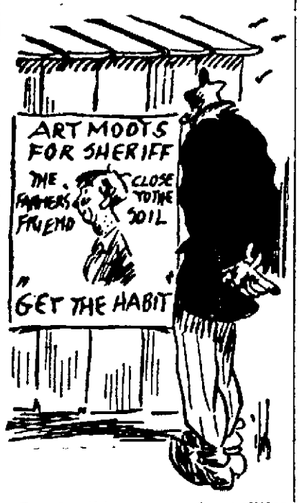

It is difficult to even keep your thinking up to date. We turn out so many thinkers from our multitude of colleges nowadays that the bulk of the work is being taken off the shoulders of the old and gladly assumed by the young. This puts it up to the older ones who refuse to be crowded out to keep refurnishing their minds continually. Some younger thinkers are advocating a great many things that every person of experience knows to be foolish, but nothing can be done about it without making a big fuss, and as people grow older they dislike fusses more and more, because they realize how futile they are in that they settle nothing and leave in the minds of the fussers a firm conviction as to the disagreeableness of each other.

Nothing is so dead as an exploded joke. Several years ago some liar of unusual gifts seduced the newspapers into printing a story about a monster in a lake near Hay Springs that had its lair in a subterranean cave from which it issued at odd times to frighten everybody. He kept the ball in the air for quite a bit, and credulous people began to talk about getting up an expedition to kill it. Every now and then somebody tries to raise this joke from the dead, in order to advertise that section again, but the newspapers refuse to bite. The only liar who gets in very often now lives at O'Neill, and he does it by frankly admitting they are lies and sells them as such.

William Allen White, who has not been advertised as widely in recent months as was formerly the case, has announced himself as an independent candidate for governor of Kansas, excusing his action on the ground that both the old party nominees are not talking mean enough about the klan to suit him. We have never yet known a man really indignant enough about anything to want to run for office for that reason alone. The fact that if White is elected governor he cannot do anything more about the klan than he can do as a private citizen and editor convinces us that he is to be commended only for the novelty of the reason given.

Good times in this country are a matter of whim very largely. This is not so startling a statement as it may sound. Buying on the part of the general public is the motive force that starts the wheels of industry moving and keeps them going around. And buying is very largely a matter of whim. All at once you wake up to the idea that you want something new in the way of house furnishings or clothing. Whether you buy or not is dependent upon whether, on looking things over, you feel you actually need anything. In view of the fact, that a suit, for insance, always has one day's more wear in it, we often wonder how the clothing business is as good as it is.

ABE MARTIN

So fer th' woman in politics hain't accomplished nothin', 'cept lots o' candidates seem t' shave oftener. Time kin be relied on t' settle ever'thing, so we guess that's th' reason so many folks ask for it.

BRAIN TESTS

(By Sam Loyd.)

5 Minutes to Answer This.

I know a little tailor who is never satisfied. He had just sold a suit of clothes, and remarked: "I gained 10 per cent, on that fine suit of clothes, while if I had bought it 10 per cent cheaper and sold it for 20 per cent profit, it would have brought a quarter of a dollar less money." Now, what did he get for the suit?

Answer to Yesterday's.

OUR DAILY PUZZLE

A Three Syllable Word.

From the objects represented in the picture, select three which will form the syllables of a word of three syllables.

A Wireless Problem.

Everybody's Magazine: "I never for the life of me," observed Mrs. Callahan to Mrs. Casey, "could understand about this wireless telegraph thing."

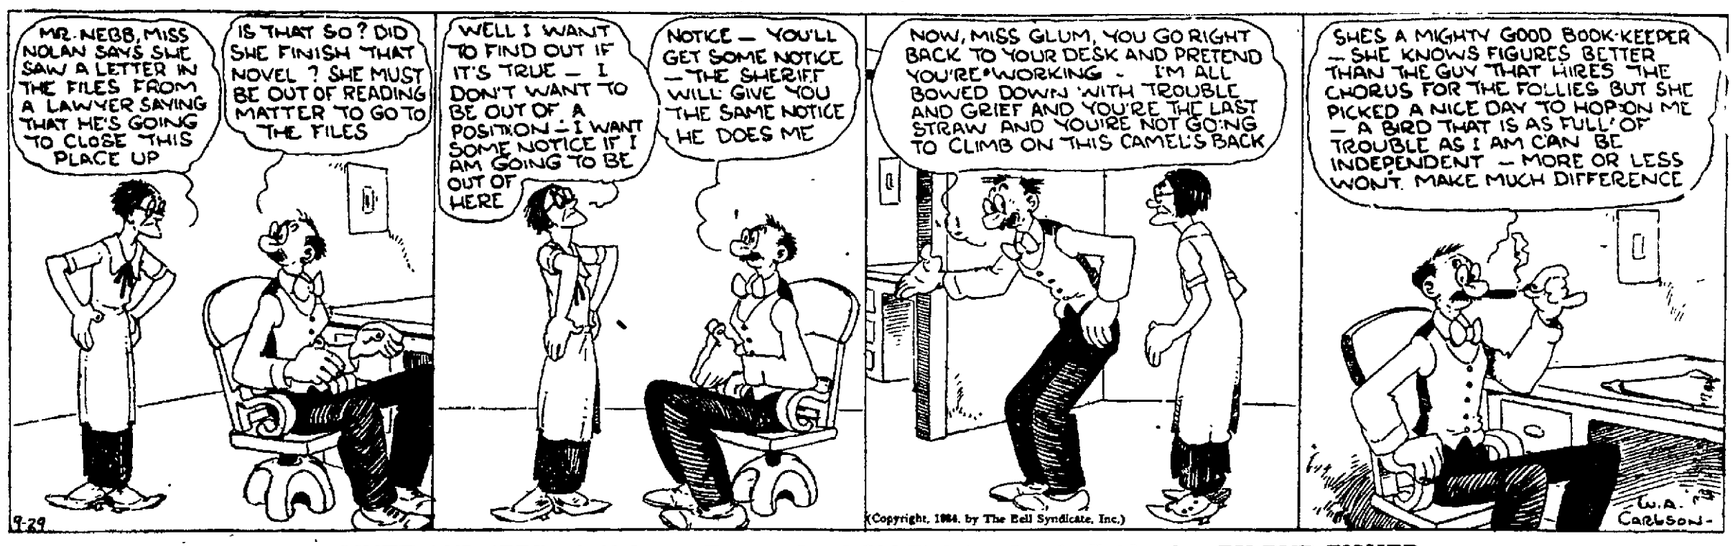

"Why," said Mrs. Casey, "it's as plain as day. They just send the mesagees thru the air instead of over the wires."

"Sure, I know that," continued Mrs. Callahan, "but how do they fasten the air to the poles?"
